Big Tables, Fair Skies Are Forecast For Holiday

Truman to Worship

100,000 on Move

Greater Washington yesterday prepared for a Thanksgiving of the real old-fashioned kind.

As early as 4 p. m. yesterday, many stores reported they were sold out of turkeys, despite heavy stocks. By 6 p. m., finding a gobbler under 15 pounds was a real problem.

Large poultry dealers said they had sold more turkeys this year than last. One estimated the increase at 15 to 20 per cent.

Even the weatherman cooperated in making it a perfect holiday. Today, he figured, would be generally pleasant—sunny in the morning, some clouds in the afternoon, but no rain, and temperatures ranging from 32 degrees to near 40.

Practically everybody but policemen, firemen and other public service workers have the day off. Many Government workers could stretch the holiday through Sunday by getting tomorrow off as annual leave.

No School Today

Schools in the District, Alexandria, and in Arlington, Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties will be closed today and tomorrow, giving children a four-day holiday. Most stores and all banks will be closed today. The United States and District branches of the Municipal Court's criminal division will be open for lockup cases only. Other branches of the courts are closed. District Government employes have today off.

Reports from travel and hotel reservation bureaus showed that most folks were planning to spend the day at home—whether "home" was in Washington or Tallahassee.

The annual mass exodus was under way last night. An estimated 100,000 persons were expected to mill through Union Station, National Airport and the bus depots last night and this morning. About a dozen extra train sections and 100 additional cars were to be put into service. Incoming travel was expected to be light today and tomorrow.

Liquor sales in the District began to zoom upward last night.

Community Chest agencies and other organizations planned numerous Thanksgiving celebrations.

Football games between the Boys Club of Washington and the Metropolitan Police Boys Club will be played this morning at Fairlawn football field, Anacostia.

Canteen Party

At the Friendship House Coed Canteen, 619 D st. se., there will be dancing, games and refreshments for 15 to 18-year-olds from 8 to 10:30 tonight. Children 9 to 12 years old will have their dance from 7 to 8:30 p. m.

Thanksgiving dinner and music are on the program this afternoon at the Hebrew Home for the Aged, 1125 Spring rd. nw. Similar festivities are scheduled at Christ Child Farm, Rockville, Md.; Children's Country Home, 18th st. and Bunker Hill rd. ne.; St. Ann's Infant Asylum, 2200 California st. nw.; St. Joseph's Home and School, Eastern ave. and Randolph st. nw., and St. Vincent's Home and School, 4th and Channing sts. ne.

The Central Union Mission, 613 C st. nw., will serve its annual Thanksgiving dinner for homeless men at 1 p. m., with a holiday service scheduled at 7:45 p. m.

Tomorrow night, the District National Guard will hold a Thanksgiving Victory Carnival from 8 to midnight at the armory, 2001 East Capitol st. There will be no admission charge. Proceeds from food and entertainment booths will go to welfare organizations.

4 Survivors Found On Section Beached On Canadian Island

Ketchikan, Alaska, Nov. 26 (AP).—Four shocked, chilled survivors and the bodies of four other crew members were found today on the beached bow section of the shattered Army transport Clarksdale Victory.

The second mate said he thought the other 43 crewmen went to the bottom in the stern half of the broken ship.

The Coast Guard said Second Mate Henry H. Wolfe of Oakland, Calif., informed his rescuers that no survivors were able to get away in lifeboats after the ship rammed onto rocky little Hippa Island Monday night and broke apart under the hammering of the rough sea.

Survivors were reported suffering from shock as well as from the long salt water exposure of their feet.

Other survivors reported by the Coast Guard rescue party were Third Mates William M. Rasmussen, Modesto, Calif., and Clair E. Driscoll, Los Angeles, and Seaman Carlos Sanabria, Honduras.

The 10,850-ton transport, southbound with cargo, hit the rocky island, off northern British Columbia 140 miles southwest of here, so hard that the bow section was high on the beach, with its nose in the woods, when the sea subsided today.

A PBY plane dropped stretchers to the rescuers for transfer of the four survivors and the three dead across the island to the leeward side. They will be evacuated by Coast guard cutter or plane. The cutter Wachusett, which was standing by, was reported to have a doctor aboard. Another cutter, the Citrus, which sent the 12-man landing party which discovered the survivors, also was at the scene.

26 Germans Arrested In Cigarette Robbery

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 26 (AP). The theft of 8000 cartons of American cigarettes worth 10 million marks (one million dollars) on the black market has been solved with the arrest of 26 Germans in Bremerhaven, U. S. Army officials said today. Most of the cigarettes have been recovered. Those arrested were mostly dock or railway workers.

Tiny Infant Holds to Life At Hospital

A prematurely born baby who weighed 1½ pounds at birth Friday, was given a fighting chance to live yesterday.

Mrs. Zimmerman

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Zimmerman, jr., of 4713 N. Rock Spring rd., Arlington, the pint-sized infant is "doing well" in its oxygen incubator at Doctors Hospital.

Every two hours a nurse gives the child its food ration—five or six eyedroppers of powdered milk.

Dr. William Tenenblatt, who delivered the infant, yesterday said its chances for life "were almost nil at birth, but now have increased to a little less than an even chance."

Mrs. Zimmerman, 32, whose husband is Assistant Commissioner of the Office of Indian Affairs, gave birth to the child at home.

She extends much of the credit for the baby's successful delivery to Miss Bertha Tiber, a nurse with the Office of Indian Affairs, who is making her home with the Zimmermans temporarily.

Dr. Tenenblatt, an obstetrician for Group Health Association, Inc., to which the Zimmermans belong, had instructed Miss Tiber by phone during the day, and was on hand Friday at 7:40 p. m. to deliver the child.

The infant was swathed in blankets, surrounded by hot water bottles, and rushed by ambulance to the hospital about 15 minutes after birth.

And there, said Nurse Marjorie Bradley yesterday, the child is "crying and sneezing and coughing" just like its larger counterparts. Miss Bradley, a veteran of five years' service in the hospital's obstetrical wards, thinks the 13½-inch girl will live. "It's the first 48 hours that count," she declared.

But Group Health pediatricians take a more cautious view. Most babies that tiny, one said, don't live. "If it comes through," he said, "it will be quite lucky."

The mother, resting at home after leaving the hospital Tuesday, said the infant is to be named Mary Eleanor.

The Zimmermans returned to Washington recently when the Office of Indian Affairs was transferred here from Chicago. They have a 20-month-old son.

Speech Is Okay, But—

Schwellenbach Has Bad Time Dodging Repeat Performance

Hereafter, it is reported on reliable authority, the State Department ghost writers will check on where speeches they prepare for Cabinet members and others, are to be delivered.

Recently they had a request from Labor Secretary Lewis B. Schwellenbach for notes for use in a dinner speech in New York October 9. The discussion was to be aspects of the Marshall Plan of particular interest to labor.

A few days later they got a similar request from Isadore Lubin, adviser on economics for United Nations. He was sent the same notes.

Lubin spoke first.

"If I'd only had five minutes warning," Schwellenbach complained last night, "I'd have been all right. But I didn't have it."

The story recently was revealed to some of Schwellenbach's Cabinet associates. Schwellenbach is now known as the "Secretary of Labor and Master of Ad-Lib."

Freedom Train Opens 2-Day Stand

Seven-Car Special Goes on Exhibition At Union Station; Ceremony Today

KEY DOCUMENTS on Freedom Train. Story on Page B-1.

Ceremony at 9:30

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Freedom Train, carrying a precious cargo of documents which helped forge the American heritage of liberty, arrives in the Nation's Capital today.

The seven-car Freedom special, due in from Baltimore early this morning, will make a two-day stop—today and tomorrow—at Track 4, Union Station. From 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. its exhibition cars will be open to the public.

There's no charge to step up and see the priceless papers and manuscripts. The Freedom Train will be open on a first-come first-served basis. Youngsters under 12 must be accompanied by a parent or teacher.

A brief ceremony at 9:30 a. m. will mark the arrival of the Diesel-driven gleaming white, red-and-blue striped train, making its fifty-ninth stop on a year-long trip which will take it through all 48 States, into 306 communities, over 30,000 miles.

Speaker of the House Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, will deliver the ceremony address at the west concourse of the station. Admission to the ceremony will be limited to ticket holders, but the speech will be broadcast by loudspeaker through the station area. There will be music by the United States Marine Band. No tickets are needed to view the exhibit.

Enter at Gate 4

The line to enter the Freedom Train will be formed from Gate 4, through the west concourse, and north on 1st st. ne. Around 10000 persons are expected to pass through the three exhibition cars each day during the 12-hour showing. Altogether, 580,000 Americans have seen the exhibits. The largest number to get through the cars in a single day was 13,222 in Paterson, N. J.

In order to minimize disappointment, at 8 each night members of the Marine guard will pass along the line and let it be known how many more persons can reasonably expect to board the train before the door-closing deadline at 10 p. m.

The 28-man Marine guard, traveling on the train along with nine civilians, is commanded by Lieut. Col. Robert F. Scott, formerly stationed at the Marine Barracks here. The local Knights of Dunamis, national Eagle Scout honor society, will assist the Marines.

President Truman is expected to visit the Freedom Train tomorrow. Among the 127 documents being shown is Mr. Truman's Proclamation of the Independence of the Philippines, issued July 4, 1946.

Concerts Planned

Besides the Marine Band, concerts will be given at the West Concourse today by the Police Band, at noon; Army Band, at 2 p. m.; Air Forces Band, at 4 p. m.; Navy Band, at 7:30 p. m.

The Freedom Train, sponsored by the American Heritage Foundation, was created on the suggestion of Attorney General Tom Clark. The idea behind the train is to awaken and rededicate Americans to their heritage of freedom, fought for and won by our forefathers.

The local Freedom Train program has been arranged by a Board of Trade committee headed by Joseph C. McGarraghy. Also participating is the Citizens Committee for Rededication Week, headed by Trade Board President John A. Reilly. This week has been proclaimed Rededication Week

Station WOL will broadcast the ceremonies at 9:30 a. m. WTOP will broadcast from the train at 9:45 a. m.

'Imperialist' Aims Assailed By Molotov

Motives of Western Powers Attacked At Opening of Talks On German Treaty

By Ned Russell

London, Nov. 26 (NYHT).—Vyacheslav M. Molotov, Soviet Foreign Minister, accused the western powers at the Council of Foreign Ministers today of seeking to impose "an imperialist peace," which he said held "the seeds of conflict and even war."

His attack on the aims of the United States, Britain and France was the major theme of a long speech which opened the discussion of a German peace treaty.

Molotov was sharply rebuked by George C. Marshall, Secretary of State. In an extemporaneous speech, Marshall accused him of "alleging evil motives which are figments of propaganda and not of the mind," and urged the conference to "try to reach agreement for the benefit of the entire world."

It was probably the severest public statement Marshall has made to the Soviet's familiar assault on American policy, with the possible exception of his speech at Chicago November 18.

Follows Austrian Question

The exchange came after the Austrian question, aim of the Western powers' first order of business, was sent to the Ministers' deputies.

Marshall also renewed his plea for agreement on the political and economic unification of Germany as the first step toward preparation of a peace treaty. He also refuted Molotov's implication that the Western powers were trying to delay a settlement of the German problem.

"An agreed basis for peace," he said "is the ardent desire of the whole American people and the great objective of the American delegation. We want a German peace treaty as quickly as possible."

Ernest Bevin, British Foreign Secretary, also scolded Molotov.

"We are used to this now," Mr. Bevin said in a bored manner. "I suppose we are all warmongers now. The only good saint in the world is the Soviet Union. As for the rest, I suppose we all come from down below."

Everybody chuckled at this, including Molotov.

Bevin Asks For "Humor"

"If we treat these charges with the humor they deserve," Bevin added, "we may get more peace."

Georges Bidault, French Foreign Minister, also rapped Molotov. He told him that his references to imperialism and war "do not improve the chances of settlement" of the German problem.

The argument, which was noteworthy for the prompt way the three Western leaders hit back at Molotov, arose after the Council had agreed on its agenda for this session.

The four Ministers agreed after some confusion to place the Austrian treaty problem at the top of the agenda and then by-passed it by referring it to their deputies who are to report back to them by December 2. The rest of the agenda is devoted exclusively to German problems.

Six Items on Agenda

Final agreement included an understanding that the ministers would be free to go from one item to another without waiting for decisions on any of them.

The agenda follows:

1. Report on the Austrian Treaty Commission.
2. Preparation of a German peace treaty, the discussion to cover problems of procedure and frontiers.
3. Economic principles for Germany, the level of postwar German economy and reparations.
4. Form and scope of the provisional political organization in Germany.
5. Implementation of the Moscow decisions of the Foreign Min-

President's Pilot Reports

Fire on Douglas DC-6 Blamed On Gasoline From Wing Tanks

By the United Press

One of the two recent fires which resulted in grounding of all Douglas DC-6 airplanes was caused by suction of gasoline from an overflowing wing tank into the cabin heating system, Lieut. Col. Henry T. Myers, President Truman's personal pilot said yesterday.

Myers made the disclosure in reply to questions after it was announced that today he will fly Mr. Truman's New DC-6, the Independence, to the Douglas plant in Santa Monica, Calif., for modifications.

Myers grounded the Presidential ship November 12, at the same time that all airlines using the 52-passenger planes suspended them from service.

This action followed two fires in flight. The first occurred on a United Air Lines DC-6, causing it to crash in Bryce Canyon, Utah, on October 24, with a loss of 52 lives. The second caused an American airlines ship to make an emergency landing at Gallup, N. M., on November 11, without injury to any of its 25 occupants.

Myers said a committee of manufacturing, airline and government officials in Santa Monica has discovered that the fire in the American plane was caused by the igniting of gasoline which was sucked into the cabin air-conditioning mechanism after overflowing from a wing tank.

He said the trouble can be corrected by moving the overflow drain to the end of the wing or aft of the air scoop which is located under the plane's belly, and takes in air for the heater and supercharging apparatus.

The gasoline that overflowed was in an alternate tank. It could overflow, Myers said, when being transferred to main tanks for burning in the engines or because of leaking valves.

By tests with colored fluid, he said, the experts found that during the overflow the gas was sucked into the air scoop.

Myers said this may have caused the United crash too, although it is not certain yet.

Oct. 1 Figures Revised

Grain Export Goal for Year Cut by 50 Million Bushels

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Administration's goal for export of grain to food deficit nations for the crop year ending June 30, has been reduced to 520 million bushels—50 million below the goal set by President Truman October 1, it was revealed yesterday.

The reduced figure was attributed to the State Department by Secretary of Agriculture Anderson in testimony before the House Banking and Currency Committee.

Anderson told the committee that the new figure "seems to me for the time being a very good figure for total grain exports for this crop year.

"It is halfway between the indicated minimum and maximum limits of 470 and 570 million bushels, and includes 70 million bushels of coarse grains, which leaves a total of 450 million bushels of wheat."

The lowered goal, Anderson said, was used by the State Department "as the basis for estimates of the amount of interim aid needed to finance grain exports."

Anderson appeared before the committee in support of (1) "allocation and inventory control of scarce commodities which basically affect the cost of living or industrial production," and (2) "rationing and price control legislation. . . to protect our own economy."

Anderson named meat and cereals as the most likely commodities to be put under price and rationing controls if such powers are granted and enforced.

Anderson's proposals for allocation powers over grain led to a heated exchange between him and Representative Frederick C. Smith (R., Ohio).

Smith declared Anderson was asking for the power to seize grain on the farms. Anderson denied this charge, declaring that the powers sought were such allocations controls as limiting the amount of grain millers may make into flour, and limiting the amount of flour delivered to bakers and other consumers, and limiting the marketing weights for hogs.

Smith repeated that the powers asked would permit seizure of farm stocks.

"I'd like to put a cigarette-rolling machine in front of one of the Ruhr coal mines and demonstrate how much more coal would be produced," Anderson replied, approving Spence's idea.

France Orders 20 Russians Be Deported

Reds Are Blamed For Political Disorders; Soviet Protests Action

Paris, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—The French government has ordered 19 Russians deported to Soviet territory for fomenting political disorders in France, it was announced today, and further deportations may result.

The Soviet Embassy immediately protested.

Those expelled included the editor of the Russian-language newspaper, Soviet Patriot, and three officers of the Union of Soviet Patriots. This organization represents Russian residents in France and some 10,000 White Russian refugees who were restored to Soviet citizenship when they proclaimed allegiance to communism.

The Russians, some living in Paris and some in the country, were rounded up early yesterday.

They were given 24 hours to wind up their affairs and then were taken under heavy guard to an unspecified frontier, reportedly by bus to the Russian-occupied zone of Germany.

The Soviet Embassy said the position of Soviet citizens in France had been approved by the government and was legal under the laws of France.

The officers of the Union of Soviet Patriots, the embassy said, were interested only in "acceleration of repatriation of their members."

Violence Flares

Paris, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—Police beat back demonstrators in Lyons with tear gas, and angry passengers and nonstrikers battled railroad pickets with their fists in the Paris area today amid reports the Communists planned to use labor unrest as a springboard to seize power.

The rail walkout was only 50 per cent effective as workers kept trains moving in defiance of a general strike order by their Communist-dominated union.

Premier Robert Schuman, in an effort to widen the rift between "justified" and "political" strikers, promised immediate wage increases and sweeping cost-of-living allowances. He appealed to 1,500,000 idle workers to return to their jobs tomorrow and warned the government would use every means in its power to crack down on labor agitators.

In a radio address, Schuman said his new Centrist government realized many claims of the strikers were justified.

"But deep drama lies in the fact," he said, "that too often this situation is used for political ends and that this poverty is exploited by certain persons for purposes which have nothing to do with the workers' lot."

The right-wing newsapper Epoque reported government agents had seized a Communit Party order in the Nord Department alerting all Communist cells for a possible coup d'etat. The report was not confirmed officially, but Paris newspapers said Schuman had ordered troops rushed home from Germany and North Africa to insure order.

Barrett Rescinds Secrecy Rule On Traffic Ticket Adjustments

Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett had a change of heart yesterday—on the advice of Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West—and rescinded his order on traffic ticket adjustment lists.

On Monday Barrett informed reporters that they would no longer receive weekly lists of traffic ticket adjustments made by police. In some cases the adjustment is in the form of a warning, in others an outright cancellation.

Previously he had turned down a request from the Traffic Court Conference of the District Bar Association for information on ticket adjustments. His explanation was that this information was an "administrative" matter and not a public matter.

When reporters pointed out that the District Commissioners back in 1939 had issued an order directing specifically that all information on traffic ticket adjustments be made public, Barrett said he would continue to keep the information secret until he got a ruling

Recess Ends Hope Of Action Before Holiday; Debate Resumes Tomorrow

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday decisively rejected a proposed 30 per cent cut in foreign relief, but stalled in its drive to vote interim aid before Thanksgiving.

With the Administration's 597-million-dollar stopgap authorization still intact, Senators recessed until tomorrow to debate further amendments. Final passage was tentatively postponed until Monday.

The proposed 197-million-dollar cut in the program failed, 56 to 30. Senator George W. (Molly) Malone (R., Nev.) and seven GOP colleagues led a shortlived fight for it. They asked that only 400 million dollars be authorized, and that goods bought with this be presented as a "gift" to France, Italy and Austria, for "free relief."

Cut Voted on Separately

The Senate defeated by voice vote their whole bloc of amendments to substitute "gratis" relief for the bill's American-supervised revolving fund method of multiplying aid, through sale of supplies for local currency.

The 197-million-dollar cut was voted on separately. Twenty-seven Republicans joined 29 Democrats in opposition to the slash. Twenty Republicans and 10 Democrats voted for it.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee Tuesday approved a 108-million-dollar cut in western Europe relief, but added 60 million dollars for China. But the House committee cut was by a close 10 to 9 vote that may be reversed before it goes to the floor.

Surplus Food Provided

Before recessing over the holiday, the Senate unanimously amended its own aid bill to permit the Commodity Credit Corporation to channel its surplus food stocks into the program, as below parity prices.

A wheat-saving device, the amendment would make available as food substitutes canned fruits and vegetables, dried eggs, beans, peas, soybeans, dried fruit, citrus juices and other commodities acquired by the CCC in its price-support program.

To clear the way for below parity foreign relief sales, the Senate approved this pricing formula: The CCC could dispose of the goods at the price "equivalent of the domestic market price of a quantity of wheat having a caloric value equal to that of the quantity of the commodity so disposed of."

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), told the Senate the substitute food amendment has the

Iliff Named Loan Director Of World Bank

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

William A. B. Iliff of Great Britain has been appointed loan director of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, President John J. McCloy announced yesterday.

Iliff, who takes office January 2, will replace Charles C. Pineo of Canada, who resigned several weeks ago. A retired officer of the Royal Bank of Canada, Pineo will return to private life, having agreed to serve with the World Bank only a year when appointed in 1946 by Eugene Meyer, first president.

Iliff will come to Washington from service with the British government in various financial positions throughout the world. His career has involved him closely in the study of national finances and budgets and in negotiation of loan and settlement agreements in which the British treasury has been interested.

His present post is in Cairo, Egypt, where he is financial adviser to the British Middle East office. In 1944 he was financial adviser to the Governor of Burma and earlier in the war years he

Broadened Controls Over Exports Asked

Harriman Favors Allocation Power On Steel, Other Scarce Commodities

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Commerce Secretary Harriman yesterday asked Congress for the authority to allocate scarce commodities, particularly steel, and for an expanded export control program.

He indorsed President Truman's proposals for authority to reimpose price control and rationing in general, and specifically asked for power to put price ceilings on commodities shipped abroad.

Harriman, whose role is Administration quarterback for the 10-point anti-inflation program, yesterday took his own turn at carrying the ball. He testified before the Joint Senate-House Committee on the Economic Report.

Taft Favors Some Points

Meantime, the committee's chairman, Senator Taft (R., Ohio), who is also head of the GOP Policy Committee, predicted that some of the less controversial points of the anti-inflation program may be enacted by Christmas.

He listed possible approval of:

1. Extension of export controls, which expire February 29.

2. Restoration of consumer credit — instalment buying — controls, which expired November 1.

3. Federal regulation of speculative operations on the commodity exchanges.

Rent Control Extension Predicted

At the same time, Chairman Wolcott (R., Mich.) of the House Banking and Currency Committee said prospects for extending rent controls "are good." They are due to go out of existence on February 29.

Both Taft and Senator Millikin (R., Colo.), said that there is no chance of speedy approval of Mr. Truman's demand for restoration of price control and rationing authority.

In his testimony to the Joint Economic Committee, Harriman argued briefly for extension of consumer credit controls and authority to regulate transportation, particularly to make maximum use of limited freight cars, where the situation is "acute."

Allocations Stressed

But principally, he put the weight of his appeal on allocations and export controls, the two major responsibilities of the Commerce Department under the 10-point program.

In asking for allocation authority, Harriman repeatedly emphasized that no comprehensive system, such as that operating during the war, was contemplated. Present very rigid controls over tin, still exercised by the department, would not be invoked in any such degree for other scarce items, he said.

The controls granted should be "limited in character and applicable only to scarce commodities," he declared. But within these limits, he said, it was necessary to have authority "to order set-asides and to issue priorities; to issue limitation orders; and to control inventories and to allocate scarce materials."

The purpose and effect of all these devices is simply to channel scarce goods to the most essential users, denying, or limiting their flow to other, less essential, destinations.

"The most important place in which this power can be exercised is over steel," the Secretary said. "The increased production of freight cars, so greatly needed by our domestic economy, is a case in point. Another example is that steel may be available for increased production of farm equipment so essential to maintain our own food production on high levels and to increase food supplies in other countries."

Turning to export controls, Harriman sought to show that they contributed to the battle against inflation. Foreign demand for many scarce commodities, he pointed out, is so great that it would drive prices skyward if there were no limitations on the export of these items.

Furthermore, he said, export controls help out the Marshall Plan program, in that they permit the Government to channel scarce goods to the European nations where the need is greatest, instead of letting them flow to other countries where they are less essential.

But, he said, with the end of OPA, the Commerce Department cannot control the price at which goods are sold for export, and the results are damaging. He said:

"There is a tendency for inflated world prices of commodities to infiltrate into the domestic economy. Foreign purchasers are often willing to pay prices substantially above the domestic price of scarce materials. Exporters are therefore in position to sell them at excessive prices and hence to pay excessive prices for their supplies, thus bidding the available supplies away."

Harriman said that curtailed appropriations for his export control staff had grievously limited the extent of its operations, cutting down the number of commodities under control, lessening effective enforcement and forbidding desirable supervision of the destination of exports.

He asked for a tripling of the present appropriations of one million dollars, so that a present staff of about 100 people could be expanded to 300.

This phase of his testimony led to a somewhat acrimonious colloquy between him and Taft as to whose responsibility it was that the appropriations had been cut. Taft denied that the responsibility could be saddled onto the Republicans.

Harriman will return to the committee tomorrow to answer members' questions. Another witness, to follow him, will be Secretary of the Treasury Snyder.

W. A. B. Iliff of Britain Named World Bank Loan Director served with the British army, taking part in the historic evacuation of Dunkirk.

Prior to the war his assignments with the British government included service with the Ministry of Labor and as permanent secretary, Ministry of Public Security, in northern Ireland. Commissioned in 1916 in the Indian army, Iliff saw service on the northwest frontier, and in Mesopotamia, northern Persia and southern Russia.

He is 49, having been born October 2, 1898, at Kircubbin, County Down, Ireland. In 1923 he married Beryl Mary Chambers of County Down. She is expected to join him here with their two children.

Iliff will find at least six loan applications totalling more than $1,600,000,000 awaiting his attention when he takes up his work here. These are from Chile for 40 million; Czechoslovakia, 350 million; Iran, 250 million; Poland, 600 million; Italy, 250 million; and Mexico, 209 million.

The bank, which now has approximately 500 million dollars on hand for loans, already has made four loans totalling slightly more than 500 million dollars. These were to France for 250 million; The Netherlands, 195 million; Denmark, 40 million; and Luxembourg, 12 million.

Loans by the World Bank may be made only for productive purposes, not for food or other expendables. In addition to replacement of war-wrecked industrial plants, applications generally are for funds to enlarge productive capacity and transportation facilities and to purchase raw materials for conversion into industrial products.

No Work to Do, N. J. Port Warden Resigns His Job

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 26 (U.P.).—All play and no work has made Edward M. Stack resign as port warden of Hudson County.

"That no work has been done by me as port warden is not my fault," Stack said yesterday in his letter of resignation to Gov. Alfred Driscoll.

"There just doesn't seem to be any use for a port warden in Hudson County, or any other county."

Stack is one of the port wardens the Governor is allowed by law to appoint for every large municipality bordering on certain navigable waters. A warden's job is to inspect damaged ships for insurance purposes.

But there hasn't been a ship collision in waters around Hudson County for years. So Stack said he not only hasn't done any work—he doesn't expect to do any.

Governor Driscoll replied, "You are entitled to congratulations and grateful thanks for a straightforward statement."

Senate Beats Aid Cut Move

support of Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson and the Senate Appropriations Committee. Accepted by Foreign Relations Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), this change was snapped through viva voce.

Only noncontroversial amendments, acceptable to the bipartisan leadership, remained in the bill when the Senate took a 5:15 p. m. recess.

An amendment by Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R., Mo.), which would have earmarked in the bill the specific amounts intended for France, Italy and Austria was rejected after Vandenberg took the floor against it. Vandenberg argued such a breakdown by countries would imply a United States "obligation" in each case. The bill as now written has a "no guarantee" saving clause.

Two other amendments by Donnell were accepted, without a record vote. One requires recipient countries to deposit in a special account the local currency purchase price of all goods not bought with dollars at the time relief supplies are delivered. The special funds would be used to provide more relief and pay local relief expenses under agreements to be reached with each country.

The other change by Donnell requires any agreements on relief reached between our own occupying authorities in Austria, the Austrian government, and the Soviet occupation command to conform with interim aid and occupation "objectives."

Vandenberg dropped the drive for immediate passage after a long speech by Senator Dennis Chavez (R., N. Mex.). Chavez proposed making manufacturing and transportation equipment available to South American countries, in return for relief goods for Western Europe. The Senate will vote on the Chavez amendment when it reconvenes tomorrow.

Awaiting a vote also was an amendment by Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) for legislative observers to check and report on distribution of relief supplies.

The Malone amendment to cut the program $197,000,000 was opposed by Vandenberg as a "shotgun" reduction. The Michigan Republican said: "I know of no advantage in throwing a 15-rope to a man who is drowning 20 feet offshore."

The vote that followed split the Senate GOP leadership and divided Republicans themselves, 20 for the cut to 27 against.

Senate Republican Leader Wallace H. White, jr. (Me.), voted with Vandenberg against the slash. But Senate Republican Steering Chairman Robert A. Taft (Ohio), Senate Republican Whip Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) and Senate Republican Conference Chairman Eugene Millikin Colo.) voted "Aye."

Jointly presenting the amendment with Malone were Senators Bricker (Ohio), Kem (Mo.), Williams Del.), Wilson (Iowa), Ecton (Mont.), Dworshak (Idaho) and Jenner (Ind.).

These eight offered nine other amendments which were defeated en bloc. These were designed to supply relief in "goods" only and deliver these "for free." Vandenberg said the amendments aimed a "monkey wrench" at European relief methods followed by this country since UNRRA expired.

"We are not simply relieving distress of the indigent," said Vandenberg. "Whole populations are unable to obtain these goods. All need this food and fuel. It is just as important that the middle classes not starve or freeze as it is to get help to the indigent."

Malone argued the 400 million dollars aid he proposed was sufficient to carry western Europe until Congress returns in January. If more is needed, after "checking," he said Congress could provide it then.

He said he and his eight cosponsors favored supplying all relief goods "gratis" to keep America free of any European "WPA" and to make sure the hungry get fed. In Europe now, Malone said, "the man with money can eat and the man without money can't eat."

German Machines Transfer Continues

Lovett Says Dismantling Is Saving U. S. Expense of Reequipping Other Nations

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The United States has no intention of stopping the dismantling of excess German factories and the transfer of their machinery to Allied nations as reparations, Acting Secretary of State Lovett indicated in a formal statement yesterday.

These transfers, Lovett said, will help rather than hinder the European recovery program, and will lighten the ultimate burden on American taxpayers. For, he argued, Germany cannot possibly use all her excess plants for years, in view of her shortages of food, fuel and raw materials.

"Other countries, in large part because of German destruction, urgently need this equipment," he said, "and it could not be procured elsewhere or, if available, could only be procured by the use of dollar credits."

May Ask More for Greece

Lovett issued his statement at a press conference at which he also announced:

1. Congress may be asked for more money for Greece to meet unforeseen expenses there during the current fiscal year;

2. The State Department will be ready to submit a modest program of aid to China to the regular session of Congress beginning in January, and

3. American embassies in Latin America have virtually completed official soundings to discover whether Argentina and other supplying nations can give additional help to European recovery.

The Acting Secretary's statement on reparations was prompted by a rising public clamor, starting in Germany and spreading to congressional committees here, to suspend the removal of German factory machinery as reparations.

Authorized at Potsdam

The dismantling was authorized in general terms by the Potsdam conference of 1945, and more specifically by the Paris conference in March, 1946, which fixed a ceiling on future German industrial production. War plants were to be destroyed; nonwar productive capacity above the permitted ceiling was to be made available to Allied nations as reparations for war damage.

It was agreed that Russia should get a net 10 per cent of the transferred equipment from the western zones, plus another 15 per cent in exchange for food and raw materials which Russia would send into the western zones. Most of the transferred equipment would go to Germany's western neighbors, in accordance with allocations worked out by the 18-nation Inter-allied Reparation Agency at Brussels.

Can't Use Machines Now

Altogether 682 plants were earmarked for dismantling, and 75 actually had their machinery removed prior to the announcement last August of a new and higher permitted ceiling of industrial production. The new ceiling on steel production was just short of 11 million tons annually, although Germany has not yet reached an actual annual output of 3,500,000 tons.

The Lovett statement suggested that it would be a long time before Germany even reached her permitted level of production, especially since there are world-wide shortages of food, fuel and raw materials.

"The only way by which Germany could use its total industrial capacity," the statement said, "would be to grant her absolute priority over other European countries in the allocation of scarce materials. Such action is, of course, completely undesirable, and it is expected that the utmost German effort will be required to attain even by 1951 the volume of output in the bizonal area envisaged by the revised level of industry plan."

Lessens Drain On U. S.

Most of the contemplated removals, the statement went on, represent swollen capacity built by Hitler in connection with the German war machine.

"The usefulness of such equipmen to the recipient countries is amply evidenced by the eagerness with which the member nations of the Interallied Reparation Agency seek to secure it," the statement said.

"Rather than serving as a drain upon the United States through increased financial assistance to other European countries, the removal program will tend to have the opposite effect of lessening this burden. This will result not only from the partial fulfillment of capital requirements but also through the produce manufactured as this equipment is integrated into productive facilities of the recipient countries."

Would Lie Idle Otherwise

If the earmarked machinery were not removed it would simply lie idle for the next few years and deteriorate, the statement said. The amount of labor and raw materials needed to dismantle and ship the equipment, it went on, "is relatvely negligible," employing "only a few tens of thousands" of unskilled workers, many of them from the ranks of displaced persons.

Lovett's statement on Greece did not say flatly that Congress would be asked for funds in addition to the 300 million dollars appropriated last May. It said only that the Griswold mission in Greece and the State Department "are studying carefully" the probable effect of several factors not foreseen when the program was submitted to Congress.

Added Greek Factors Cited

Among these it cited the maintenance of 310,000 refugees from the guerilla warfare, a number that may increase to 500,000 by January 1; the loss of about one third of the Greek wheat crop through drought; the allocation of nine million dollars to buy supplies for the Greek army instead of for strictly economic purposes, as originally planned; the rise in world prices, and the fact that Greece would get 10 million dollars less than originally planned from the 332-million-dollar post-UNRRA relief program of last spring.

The necessity of asking for more money, Lovett said, would depend on the results of studies now being made.

As for China, the Acting Secretary said it was an immensely complex job to make estimates for a country which allots about 70 per cent of its budget to military purposes.

Grain Export Goal Reduced to," Anderson replied, heatedly.

"I'm glad you do, but I don't," Smith responded.

"I can't be blamed for that," was Anderson's reply.

At this point, Chairman Jesse P. Wollcott (R., Mich.) suddenly adjourned the hearing until next week "to permit Mr. Anderson to keep a previous appointment."

While Anderson was testifying before the House Committee, the Senate Appropriations Committee was hearing commodity exchange officials, grain dealers and millers discuss the effect of the export program upon domestic economy.

All warned that present prospects for next year's wheat crop were far below this year's record yield — some predicting that it wouldn't provide enough to meet domestic requirements.

George Kublin of the Kansas City Board of Trade declared that the proposed shipment of 500 million bushels of wheat this year would place the country's reserve supply of wheat "dangerously low" in view of the present poor condion of winter wheat in the Southwest.

This year, Kublin said, is the driest since 1936. That year's crop totaled only 626 million bushels, he said, not enough to meet domestic needs.

Price Feuquay of the Enid (Okla.) Board of Trade, predicted this year's winter wheat crop would not be more than half this year's yield.

"We'd like a guarantee of 50 per cent of last year's crop," he said.

D. A. Stevens, wheat buyer for General Mills, Inc., declared the Nation's production this year to be 703 million bushels of all grains of the Administration's "domestic utilization and export program."

Philip W. Pillsbury, president of Pillsbury Mills, warned that present Government plans threatened "our own economy to a point where continuing effective aid is made impossible."

In the last three years, Pillsbury said, "the export movement was one of the first claimants on our wheat supply. The 'residual claimant' was our own domestic carryover."

"This year," he added, "with a very uncertain outlook for the new winter wheat crop as a result of a prolonged summer and fall drought in the Southwest, it would be dangerous again to pursue a policy of letting year-end stocks be depleted to the levels of the last two years."

All the millers and grain men urged that this year's carryover fall not lower than 175 million bushels. Last year it was only 84 million.

Smaller Nations Ask Big Four To Hear Views on Germany

The Hague, Nov. 26 (AP).—Belgium, Luxembourg, and the Netherlands asked today to be heard on German problems, particularly that of the Ruhr, by the Conference of Foreign Ministers.

In a joint note, they recommended to the Big Four that the Ruhr district come under special international control with their governments participating.

Although they were not invited to give their views on the Allied policy in Germany, they feel, the note said, that their interests are too interwoven with Germany for decisions to be taken without previous consultation with and approval by the three nations.

The recommendations included:

1. Gradual restoration of autonomy and political responsibility in Germany within the framework of a federal constitution.

2. Control of the whole German economy insuring disarmament and demilitarization of the Reich according to the Byrnes plan of April, 1946.

3. In case of abolishment of the military occupation, strict international control of Germany's economic keypoints, such as ports, airports, traffic centers and of special regions such as the Rhine Valley.

4. Special international control of the Ruhr to coordinate development of Ruhr production with that of the whole of Europe.

isters Council regarding demilitarization in Germany.

6. The United States draft of a four-power treaty for th edisarmament and demilitarization of Germany, and other questions relating to security.

The agreement on the agenda put the ministers over their first obstacle. Yesterday, at the opening meeting of this session of the Council, they had agreed on the items to be included in the agenda but had disagreed on the order in which they are to be taken up.

Molotov Opens Debate

With settlement on the agenda, Molotov, as chairman today, opened the debate on the German problem with his attack on the Western powers.

He said they were striving "not for a democratic but for an imperialist peace, which means the domination of certain powers by others without taking account of national sovereignty."

"In this are the seeds of conflict and even war" he added.

He said the German peace treaty should be based on the Potsdam and Yalta decisions so that the country could "fulfill its obligations to its victims" and develop into a democratic state. But that, he said, was not how "other powers" wanted to handle the problem.

He said these powers, obviously meaning chiefly the United States and Britain, wanted to weaken Germany because they fear competition from it.

"Attempts will be made" Molotov said "to make use of Germany by powers who need Germany as a base for the development of war industry and to lead reactionary forces of Germany against the democratic elements of European countries liberated from fascism.

Two major thoughts predominated today's meeting. The first is the Soviet appeal for support from the German people. The econd is Soviet hostility to the Marshall Plan for European reconstruction.

Molotov's remarks are not encouraging.

Strongest Appeal to Germany

His appeal for German support is the strongest he has ever made. In previous council speeches, notably the one he made in Paris on July 10 of last year, he has called for a high level of German industry, though this has been soft-pedaled in the Communist press.

But never before has he made and all-German unified state a condition for preparation of a German peace treaty and no suggestion could be more popular with the German people.

This is the one form of political organization that the French will never authorize and which the Americans and British oppose.

Molotov's words on this subject appear to lend some substance to French fears that the Soviet plan for Germany calls for the organization of an all-German state whether the Western Powers like it or not and that Molotov intends to prepare the groundwork for its organization with headquarters in the Soviet zone in case Germany is split in two as a result of this council session.

The second thought present at today's meeting was never mentioned openly, but it was none the less there in the minds of every man in the room at Lancaster House.

It must be remembered that the Marshall Plan and the Molotov plan which opposes it both reserve a place for the future Germany. It is an essential part of both plans. The Marshall Plan foresees a revived German economy meshed in with the economies of other European states. The Molotov plan has in mind a bilateral trade agreement between Germany and the Soviet Union.

Tass Agency Sees Signs of Failure

Moscow, Nov. 26 (AP).—The Soviet news agency Tass said in a London dispatch today that British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and the British press were preparing the public in advance for possible failure of the Foreign Ministers Council conference.

The dispatch said Bevin's expression of pessimism indicated an attempt to ascribe such a breakdown in advance to the Soviet Union.

Mikolajczyk And Aides Reach N. Y.

New York, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, refugee opposition leader to the Communist-dominated government of Poland, arrived at LaGuardia Field today from London.

The exiled leader of the Peasant Party and his entourage were met by former U. S. Ambassador to Poland, Arthur Bliss Lane, Mrs. Lane and Representative Antoni N. Sadlak (R., Conn.)

Lane, who left Poland in February 24, 1947, and who supported Mikolajczyk's charge that the Polish national election was a fraud, said he was present for the arrival "as a friend."

Sadlak also said he came to offer his assistance, and that he was not present in an official capacity.

Before leaving the field, Mikolajczyk told newsmen that he would hold a press conference tomorrow.

"I want to express my appreciation to the American people with whom we are so closely connected in our ideals of today," he said.

Mikolajczyk said he wanted to see President Truman and express his thanks.

Dr. Georgi Dimitrov, member of the central committee of the International Peasant Union who came from Washington to meet the party, said it was hoped that the Polish leader would become president of the organization.

France Fears Coup by Reds

weeks ago. Twelve persons, one a policeman, were injured in Lyons, and a railroad engineer, who remained at work, was beaten by pickets south of Paris.

Lyons strikers were dispersed by tear gas.

The Communist-led truckers union ordered long-distance haulers to strike tomorrow in sympathy with railroad men, threatening to cut off a major part of Paris' food supply, but the rail strike itself appeared to be a fizzle.

Only two Paris stations were closed, and at one of those—the Montparnasse station—a majority of workers voted to remain on the job. Several cases of sabotage were reported, however.

Passengers Fight Pickets

Fist fights between pickets and passengers broke out when strikers halted two trains at the Paris suburban station of Noissy le Sec.

Schuman offered an immediate 1500-franc ($12.80) cost-of-living allowance for all salaried workers, an 1125-franc allowance for government employes and 1500 francs for Paris civil servants. He also proposed increases in pensions and promised sweeping laws to enable workers to live on what they earn. He said the increases would be retroactive to November 24, but warned workers would not be paid for days they were on strike.

The first response to his speech came tonight, when a mass meeting of Paris civil service workers voted unanimously to ask the executive committee of the General Union of French Government Workers to declare a strike, effective Friday.

English Wreck Kills One

Farnborough, England, Nov. 26 (A.P.).—One passenger was killed and 20 others injured tonight when a Southern Railway train plowed into the rear of the famous Bournemouth Belle express about 3 miles from this Hampshire County town.

Reds Deny They Plan Dec. 1 Coup; Cominform Blamed

Rome, Nov. 26 (A.P.).—The Italian rightist and independent press reported from "trustworthy sources" today that nationwide strikes were being planned in Italy and France for December 1. The Communist Party ridiculed the reports.

The independent Espresso said Christian Democrats, who are backing the government of Premier Alcide de Gasperi, believed the disorders of the past two weeks in Italy, which have taken at least 24 lives, were "a specific plan by Togliatti and Thorez, put into operation under orders of the Cominform."

Palmiro Togliatti is Italian Communist chief, and Maurice Thorez is the French Communist leader who went to Moscow more than a month ago. The Cominform is the new Communist international news bureau set up in Belgrade, Yugoslavia.

Risorgimento also said the last fortnight's violence "zone by zone throughout the country" was planned as a rehearsal by Communist followers for a "national manifestation."

Rumors of Coup

Espresso said rumors also were being spread of plans for a coup d'etat between December 24 and 30, which called for blowing up bridges across the Po.

The executive committee of the Italian Communist Party said in a statement that stories of a coup d'etat and similar reports "do not merit a denial." It added that talk of a nationwide strike "in all probability" was being instigated by big market operators who were trying to make a killing in Italian securities.

Earlier, a press spokesman for the Communist Party denied the rightist newspaper L'Ora d'Italia's assertion that the return in a day or so from Paris of Giuseppe di Vittorio, Communist secretary of the Italian General Confederation of Labor, was awaited to establish details of the purported coordinated strikes in France and Italy.

Confederation Could Do It

The confederation, with nearly six million members, is the only orgnization that could effect a nationwide strike in Italy.

Strikers at several places in localized demonstrations have erected barricades across the roads to isolate towns before attacking their political enemies' headquarters.

The proposal for a general strike was first advanced publicly a few days ago by Pietro Nennin, leader of the pro-Communist wing of the Socialists, who said he did not approve "drop by drop" demonstrations and that a general strike would really make its weight felt.

Labor confederation spokesmen at that time also scorned the idea.

Meanwhile, a general strike continued at Crotone in the Calabria region. Thousands of workers of the Montecatini and other industrial plants crowded the streets. At Cerenzia and Tiriolo, also in Calabria, other general strikes were in progress. General strikes were expected also in Catanzaro.

Paralyzing Strike Stirs Finland to Action

Helsinki, Nov. 26 (A.P.).—Finnish government members said today they had decided upon "certain actions" to settle a strike by 40,000 civil servants which threatens the domestic economy with paralysis, and severed almost every communication between Finland and the outer world.

The only trains moving today were carrying reparations to Russia and those with essential foodstuffs.

Premier Mauno Pekkala, whose leftwing Socialist Union Party merged with the Communists to form the Democratic Union, warned the strikers they risked loss of their jobs by their action.

Government workers in almost every branch of the civil service, except police and defense, went on strike for higher wages. Their walkout was almost 100 per cent effective. Telephone traffic was disconnected, trains were stopped, planes were grounded, ships were tied up, and schools closed.

The foreign press received special permission, however, to communicate with Stockholm.

Parliament had offered a general increase of 800 marks a month (approximately $6), but the committee representing the government workers turned it down.

Informants said thousands of officials might be discharged.

Political sources said such action would have the effect of granting the desire of the left wing to purge "politically less desirable elements" within the present administration who could not be discharged otherwise save for breach of duty. Some said the Communists might use the strike to attack the civil servants, the mainstay of Finland's middle class.

Harriman Asserts Civil Air Development Should Be Put Under Commerce Department

W. Averell Harriman, Secretary of Commerce, told President Truman's Air Policy Commission yesterday his department should be given the major responsibility of developing a sound economic pattern for the Nation's air lines as well as advanced-type transports for their future use.

The Civil Aeronautics Board, presently charged with the former function, should largely restrict itself to quasi-legislative and quasi-judicial activities affecting the industry, Secretary Harriman added.

Harriman said that the CAB itself admitted the inadequacy of its present rate-making set-up and had initiated action to remedy the situation.

Because of the Commerce Department's traditional role of "promoting and fostering business in general and aviation in particular," the Secretary felt it could render a valuable service in this field. At the very least, he said, the CAB should give serious consideration to Department of Commerce recommendations. His views, he added, already had been transmitted to the CAB.

Harriman

Future transport planes for civil use, Secretary Harriman said, were too expensive for either manufacturers or air line operators to engineer and build. For that reason he advocated the Department of Commerce undertaking the necessary research and development costs.

Since the Air Force already is organized for a similar military aircraft procurement program, he recommended that it act as the contracting agency for civil air transports of advanced design. He held, however, that the Commerce Department, in conjunction with the air lines, should determine their basic characteristics to insure that they would measure up to civil rather than military requirements.

W. Stuart Symington, Air Force secretary, told the commission that, unless Congress makes additional appropriations at its current session for the Air Force, the latter's strength of 55 groups, which is expected to be reached by January 1, will have to be cut to 40 groups by next fall. He repeated in part and wholly concurred in the recent testimony of Gen. Carl Spaatz, Air Force chief of staff, that a 70-group air force, backed by strong air reserve and National Guard of the air, is the nation's "minimum" requirement as a safeguard against possible foreign attack.

Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the od War Production Board and now president of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, testified at the morning session. He described Russian aircraft production as he had seen it in 1943 and 1944, saying that, by the latter date, it had reached 2000 planes a month.

"The Russians know mass production methods thoroughly," Mr. Nelson said, "and can turn out good airplanes. However, they were and I believe still are handicapped by lacy of adequate raw materials for aircraft production and I doubt if they could match our capacity in this field."

Cripps Awaits U. S. Word on Rest of Loan

London, Nov. 26 (U.P.)—Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Stafford Cripps said today Britain hopes to begin drawing on the final 400 million dollars of the American loan "shortly."

But he told American newsmen it was up to the United States to give the "go ahead" signal.

Cripps said Britain had kept the United States informed of her progress in renegotiating sterling convertibility agreements. Four already have been completed and four more are scheduled for renegotiation.

Britain suspended drawings on the balance of the $3,750,000,000 loan last August 20 when she refused to convert further sterling into gold or dollars for countries other than the United States.

Britain Will Take Over Railroads January 1

London, Nov. 26 (U.P.)—Britain's 52,000 miles of railroads will be changed from private to public ownership January 1 under the Labor Government's nationalization plan, Sir Cyril Hurcomb, chairman of the new British Transport Commission, announced tonight.

It will be the biggest government-owned railroad system now in operation in the world. Its official title will be British Railways.

British Railways will start with 20,000 locomotives, 40,000 passenger cars and more than 500,000 freigh cars. An additional privately-owned 600,000 freight cars will be taken over soon. The system runs its trains three million miles a year, carrying 1,200,000,000 passengers and 226 million tons of freight.

Technical operations will be under control of a "railway executive" of six members, drawn from the top-ranking executives of the four main line railroads. The transport commission of five members and one part-time member will decide questions of policy.

Peanut Curbs Held Unlikely Next Year

By The Associated Press

Peanut production controls may not be necessary next year, Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.) reports he has been advised by Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson.

Robert said the Secretary told him that peanuts and peanut oil, needed greatly in Europe, can be used under terms of the proposed foreign-aid bill.

Stating that he had been informed that Virginia growers strongly favored the control program—to be voted on December 9—Robertson said, however, he understood there was much opposition to it in some Southern States.

Arab-Led Forces Hold Edge in U. N.

Assembly Defers Vote on Partition Of Palestine Until Tomorrow

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—Arab-led forces fighting the proposal to partition Palestine into Jewish and Arabic countries held a slim lead tonight in a see-saw battle in the United Nations Assembly, but a final vote was put off until Friday.

On the basis of present declarations, 28 nations including the United States and Russia have come out for partition. At least 15 nations are opposed. The partition forces thus would need two more votes under the Assembly rules requiring a two thirds majority of those present and voting for approval of a major issue.

At the end of the day's debate the delegates voted 24 to 21 against a night session. Ten more speakers are left to be heard when the debate reopens Friday.

Developments in Fight

Developments in the ballot battle were:

1. The Philippines, Greece and Haiti came out against partition.

2. The Netherlands, New Zealand and Belgium pledged their votes for partition.

Partition had been approved by a 25-to-13 vote of the Assembly's Special Palestine Committee at Lake Success yesterday. Only a simple majority was needed there.

Siam voted against partition in the committee, but that vote was canceled out today when the Siamese delegation advised the U. N. it would be "officially absent" because of the "internal situation" in Siam. Earlier, advices from Bangkok said that the new Siamese government had dismissed the Siamese delegation here.

In a final word to the Assembly, British delegate Sir Alexander Cadogan stated again—for the fourth time in the Assembly debate—his government's intention not to use its troops or administration for making effective any plan which either the Jews and Arabs oppose.

The British have abstained on all votes.

The plan before the Assembly now would provide for the British to withdraw completely from Palestine by next August 1, and for two new countries, Arab and Jewish, to be created by October 1. Jerusalem would become an international city under the United Nations Trusteeship Council.

The plan also provided for the Security Council to assume the responsibility for seeing that no threats to the peace or acts of aggression are committed in the Palestine area.

Film Figures Appeal to U. S. To Drop Cases

By the United Press

Ten Hollywood movie writers and directors recently cited for contempt of Congress appealed to the Government yesterday to refrain from bringing their case to trial.

The plea was made to Attorney General Tom C. Clark and United States Attorney George Morris Fay by three lawyers representing the group—Bartley Crum, Robert W. Kenny and Martin Popper.

Fay later told newsmen that he would study it, but declined to hint what action might be taken. Sources close to the Attorney General said that in all likelihood it would be rejected.

The House voted overwhelmingly Monday to cite the 10 directors and writers for contempt for refusing to tell the House Un-American Activities Committee whether they belonged to the Communist Party. Clark ordered Fay to prosecute the case immediately because "the integrity of Congress must be maintained."

Crum, Kenny and Popper conferred with Fay this afternoon and filed a petition urging that the case be dropped.

"As Attorney General of the United States, the people's attorney, you are called upon to exercise your independent judgment on the presentation of this citation," they told Clark in a legal brief.

Hollywood producers already have decided to dismiss all the 10 persons involved. There was no indication when the Government would act on the request to forgo trial.

R-K-O First to Act, Fires Adrian Scott, Dymtryk

Hollywood, Nov. 26 (AP).—R-K-O Studio announced tonight the dismissal of Producer Adrian Scott and Director Edward Dymtryk, two of the 10 film workers who were cited in contempt of a House of Representatives committee for refusing to state whether or not they were Communists.

The firings were the first to result from the decision of a group of major film executives in New York yesterday to dismiss all 10. Both Scott and Dmytryk are regarded as top men in the industry and are in the $3000-to-$5000 weekly salary bracket. Scott produced and Dmytryk directed R-K-O's recent film, "Cross-Fire," an expose of anti-Semitism which attracted wide attention.

Scott issued a statement in behalf of himself and Dymtryk saying, "We believe that the courts will uphold our stand on principle which we now reaffirm . . .

"We, the producer and director of 'Cross-Fire,' a picture which opposes the degrading practice of anti-Semitism, feel that 'Cross-Fire' will stand as testament of our Americanism long after Rankin and Thomas are dead."

Uninhibited Rider Borrows a Trolley

Carl J. Hall, who drowned his inhibitions in alcohol and borrowed a streetcar, was turned over to probation authorities yesterday.

It was during the wee and weaving small hours yesterday morning when Hall, 21, of 507 7th st. se., boarded a Capital Transit car while the operator was buying a pack of cigarettes.

With questionable skill gleaned from streetcar riding Hall set out on a three-mile ride full of left turns. His peregrinations began at 8th and M sts. se., and ended in the 600 block of Maine ave. sw.

At that point, Hall got out and walked.

When police found him in the 500 block of Maine ave. sw., he told them he was waiting for a streetcar.

Meanwhile, the legal operator, temporarily shorn of his transportation, had reported the $20,000 loss to the company, and three police cars began searching for the stray. One took the embarrassed operator along to identify the trolley.

He pleaded guilty to a charge of taking property without right before Municipal Court Judge Armond Scott, who referred the case to probation authorities for investigation.

NLRB to Probe Dispute Over Martin Plant Vote

By The Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday directed its Baltimore regional director to investigate issues underlying objections and challenges to 614 ballots in a collective bargaining election at the Glenn L. Martin Co. plant.

The election took place August 1, the day before the Taft-Hartley act went into effect. The International Association of Machinists, independent, received 1916 votes. The CIO-United Auto Workers received 2729 votes. Another 965 workers favored neither union.

The ballots at first were impounded because neither union had complied with the Taft-Hartley act provisions requiring officers to sign non-Communist affidavits. Both unions since have filed the required papers.

Listing contracts of slightly more than $300,000, the commission announced one of the largest of the projects will serve 100 new homes for veterans on Ridgeway st., Colebrooke and Summit drs., and Cadenton, Dunbarton and Ridge rds. in the Colebrooke subdivision in Prince Georges County. The Leo Butler Co. of Silver Spring was low bidder with $27,002.

The Intercounty Construction Co. of Hyattsville, which submitted the low bid of $112,124 for construction of a new link in the Northwest Branch trunk sewer near the Boy Scout camp in Montgomery County, was awarded three lesser contracts.

These are for water and sewers in Avenue G, District Heights, for 53 new homes, at $27,287; water and sewers for 50 homes in the Columbia Forest subdivision near Chevy Chase, at $16,754, and water mains and sewers in Rhode Island ave., College Park; Underwood st. and Beech rd., University Park, and Crittenden st., Whitely subdivision, $16,951.

The Road Machinery Rental Co., Hyattsvile, received an $18,845 contract for a project in Davis, Lewis, Porter and Lacy aves.

The Nickles Brothers Co. of Hyattsville won on a bid of $18,995 for construction of more than a mile of water and sewer lines.

Smiling, Mum Curley Freed From Prison

Boston, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, smiling broadly and saying nothing, rejoined his jubilant family tonight, just five months after entering Danbury, Conn., Federal penitentiary to serve a 6-to-18 month sentence for mail fraud.

The 73-year-old veteran Democratic politician, whose sentence was commuted by President Truman, dismissed newsmen with a terse: "No comment."

Curley

Shortly after he was sped away from the prison in an automobile driven by his son, Leo, reporters were handed a written statement signed by the three-time Mayor of Boston and former Governor and Congressman, which read:

"There is nothing I can say at this time except that I was the victim of a professional confidence man and am absolutely innocent . . . I was wrongfully deprived of my liberty. . . .

Thanks Everybody

"I appreciate the action of the President of the United States. I thank all who have stood by me during this trying period."

Though he obviously was happy to rejoin his family in time for Thanksgiving at his neo-classical mansion on fashionable Jamaica-way, he looked worn and haggard and needed a shave.

Curley was sentenced June 26 despite his attorney's claim that he was suffering from nine ailments, and Curley's own remark to a Federal judge: "You are sentencing me to die. This is the death penalty."

He was president of a firm known as "Engineers Group Incorporated," which represented itself as in a position to influence the awarding of Government war contracts. Also convicted were the firm's vice president, James G. Fuller, who purportedly conceived the firm, and its treasurer, Donald Wakefield Smith, a former member of the National Labor Relations Board. Smith's sentence also was commuted by President Truman.

Fuller at Ossining

Fuller now is serving a 5-to-6 year term in prison, at Ossining, N. Y., on a grand larceny charge. Upon completion of this sentence he still has before him a sentence of from 16 months to four years on the Federal mail fraud conviction.

Curley served a jail sentence when he was 29 for taking a letter carrier's examination under another name. Campaigning from his jail cell, he won election to a minor municipal office that marked the start of his political rise.

Silent on Plans

Apparently, only Curley knew Curley's immediate plans—and he was keeping them to himself. He gave no indication whether he planned to reassume his mayor's office at once, thereby returning acting Mayor John B. Hynes to his position of city clerk.

The Mayor's office pays an annual salary of $20,000 which both Hynes and Curley received during the period Curley was imprisoned. Hynes was appointed temporary mayor by a special legislative act, with the proviso he would return to his $7500 a year clerking job with life tenure as soon as Curley returned to city hall.

Senator Jenner "Astounded"

Curley's release by commutation of sentence prompted mixed reactions. While several Massachusetts political leaders expressed approval, Senator William E. Jenner (R., Ind.) issued a statement in Washington saying he was "astounded at the brazen action of President Truman." He added:

"The President's action, however, cannot be said to be unexpected. It is in line with the activities of one who boasts of his close social and political relationship with the infamous Pendergast political machine in his home State of Missouri."

Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.), who has been demanding a Senate investigation of alleged vote frauds in the 1946 congressional election in President Truman's home district, commented:

"Mayor Curley joins the large group of Pendergast henchmen who have been recipients of executive clemency. It is said that the political password at the White House is 'Pardon me, Mr. President.'"

In August, 1946, Mr. Truman gave pardons restoring civil rights to a number of Pendergast followers who had completed vote fraud sentences.

Capitol Park Hotel Sold to Bland Chain

The Capitol Park Hotel, formerly the United Nations Service Center for over three years, on Union Station Plaza, was sold yesterday to a Charlotte, N. C. hotel man.

Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, commissioner of the Federal Works Agency which bought the building in 1943, signed papers for the transfer of the seven-story building to A. L. Bland for $360,100.

Bland owns the Dodge Hotel here, which he bought two years ago, the Hotel Charlotte, Charlotte, N. C., and the Washington Duke Hotel, in Durham, N. C.

During the war, General Fleming said, more than 3,500,000 uniformed military personnel registered at the center, which even offered fresh diapers for babies of families in transit.

The purchase price included the site, building, all furnishings and equipment, and a parking lot adjoining the hotel. Bland said he intended to renovate and refurnish the hotel, and hoped to have it in operation by April.

Gardiner Asks 78 Rent Hikes

Rent increases on 78 units owned by A. S. Gardiner & Co. in various parts of the District were asked yesterday at a hearing before James G. Tyson, Rent Control Administration examiner.

The firm requested an increase in 2 units at 1339 14th st. nw. from $35 a month to $42.50 and a jump in a third apartment at that address from $35 to $45.

At 1495 Newton st. nw., the firm proposed boosts for 29 units.

Rents from $43.50 to $58 on 24 units at 21 Kennedy st. nw. were marked for jumps from $47.85 to $63.80 in the increase request. On 10 units at 25 M st. nw., ranging in rent from $38 to $42.50, the firm asked new rents of $41.80 to $46.75, and on 12 units at 2020 Shepherd st. ne. a raise in rents now ranging from $40 to $60 to new levels of $44 to $66 was requested.

Frisbie Named To Arlington County Board

Alfred E. Frisbie, a newcomer to the Arlington political scene, yesterday was appointed to the Arlington County Board by Circuit Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

Frisbie

Selection of the 36-year-old stockbroker, who lives at 636 S. 25th st. in Arlington, caught most Arlington residents by surprise. The move fills a vacancy left by the death on November 3 of veteran board member Leo Lloyd.

Judge McCarthy said he had made the choice from a slate of 25 names submitted by various county groups after considering the appointment for nearly a month.

Frisbie, he said, had the indorsement of the Jefferson Civic Association, of which he is a member and "quite a lot of support" from citizens who requested his appointment in person or through letters.

Frisbie's name first became known in political circles last August when he was elected to the Democratic Executive Committee in the Democratic primary. He has held no other political post in the county.

County political observers pointed out that Frisbie will be the first county board member to represent the old Jefferson district in South Arlington since 1933.

Barrett Drops Secrecy Rule

from the office of the Corporation Counsel.

He got the ruling yesterday.

And a short while later, Barrett issued this statement:

"I have today conferred with Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West with respect to the present status of the order of the Board of Commissioners, dated October 17, 1939. Mr. West has advised me that the order is still in force and effect and that there have been no modifications or amendments of this order since the date of its issuance.

"Accordingly, the names of all persons having traffic tickets canceled will be made a matter of public record in compliance with the order which provides as follows:

"'That in the future the names of all persons having traffic tickets canceled will be made a matter of public record and such record will be maintained in the Police Department. In addition to the name of the person to whome the ticket is issued, the officer's name issuing the ticket and the name of the person requesting cancellation of the ticket will be recorded, as well as the reason for the adjustment being made.'"

Barrett told a reporter of The Washington Post that because of the Thanksgiving holiday he had not sent a written request for a ruling to West but instead had called him on the telephone.

District officials were as noncommittal yesterday on Barrett's reversal as they had been the day before on his directive classing ticket adjustment lists as "top secret."

Commissioner Guy Mason and Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young both said they had nothing to say on the matter. Commissioner John Russell Young was still absent from his office because of illness.

However, reversal of the order was hailed by Nathan M. Lubar, secretary of the Traffic Court Conference which last week was denied information by the police chief.

It Is A Good Thing—

Sometime ago a reporter dug up a strange habit of an African tribe which consisted of a periodical jag of meat-eating. The tribe had a word for it: gouamba. Today is the day that Americans set aside for gouamba. There will be ample scope for the trencherman at the Thanksgiving board of the American people today. And we have it on the authority of the Psalmist that it is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord by feasting.

Certainly His blessings have been made increasingly manifest to this Nation since the day when the early settlers of New England fell on their knees in their gratitude to Him. God had been good to those pioneer Pilgrims. Armed with a great faith, they set forth across a providentially quiet sea; after many days the new continent came in sight, and it turned out to be the land of Canaan. As if this weren't grace enough, Squanto, the Indian chief, came to meet them, and lo! he could speak some English, which he used for the purpose of telling them about the miracle of the Indian's corn. The day of the harvest Governor Bradford proclaimed as the day of thanksgiving. It is a festival which has been celebrated down the years with a gusto commensurate with the bounty which this America of ours has yielded. The fixin's go on inexhaustibly, as from some miraculous pitcher.

It is not pharisaical to say that the joy of feasting on this Day of Thanksgiving has never dimmed the duty of giving. That is as it should be, for both feasting and giving are blessed in the eyes of the Lord, and one justifies the other. In 1622, Jamestown was far from being in a happy or secure position; but when its inhabitants heard that other new Americans had landed at Plymouth and were in desperate need, they dispatched a vessel with food and seed corn to help the strangers who also were following the dream and engaging in the great adventure of America. The story of the two pioneer communities has an application which probably has never been more vivid than at present. At home we have obligations to our neighbors, and we can express them today by sending another contribution to the lagging Community Chest and by having "a silent guest" at our tables through CARE. That is the way to testify to the benevolence that is the spirit of Thanksgiving.

Americans today are among the few people on God's green earth who are not suffering real deprivation. Let our hearts be blended with our appetites on this great American festival!

FBI Vs. FCC

In an editorial entitled The FBI Check-up published November 18, The Washington Post called attention to Director Hoover's assurance that FBI agents do not start investigations on their own initiative, but must first be supplied with information believed to constitute a substantial basis for an investigation. That same day there appeared on the editorial page an article by Marquis Childs containing a quotation from a speech by Commissioner Clifford J. Durr of the FCC, saying that the FBI is furnishing "unsolicited" reports on individuals connected with radio. Mr. Durr further stated that if the public knew "the kind of things contained in many of these reports" it would "dismiss the information as baseless gossip." Since the information from the FBI came to the FCC "unsolicited," Mr. Childs regarded this procedure as an indication that "the FBI initiated investigations and sought to influence FCC decisions by sending reports on certain individuals to the commission."

Quite a number of our readers have since written to us calling attention to the alleged contradiction between what Mr. Hoover says about FBI methods and Mr. Durr's statement. The implication is that somebody is lying and our readers naturally want to know whom to believe. Our answer is that we do not doubt that both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Durr have made truthful statements, and we see no inconsistency between them. Mr. Hoover explains that in the course of its investigations the FBI often acquires information about Federal employes that may be of interest to other Government agencies. It quite properly transmits that information, unsolicited, to the proper officials without making recommendations as to its use or attempting to evaluate it. This unsolicited transmission of the by-products of FBI investigations does not, as Mr. Childs seems to think, indicate that the FBI proceeds of its own initiative to launch the investigations that yield such by-product data. If reports thus received by the FCC appear to be idle gossip or trivial matter, Mr. Durr and his colleagues can, and presumably do, consign them to the waste-paper basket.

In our opinion the FBI is simply doing its duty by making information on hand concerning Federal employes available to all the agencies that may be interested. Moreover, if it tried to evaluate this information instead of passing it on uncritically for what it is worth, it would lay itself open to deserved criticism for possible suppression of valuable evidence, since the FBI is not always in a position to determine the value to other agencies of the data in its possession.

Under the circumstances, we conclude that there is no basis for assuming that the truth-seeker has to choose between Mr. Hoover and Mr. Durr. We do consider it most unfortunate, however, that Mr. Durr has made charges against the FBI that are susceptible to misinterpretation. We understand that Mr. Hoover has been so angered by the attack that he has informed the FCC that he will discontinue sending it information, since the commission has not seen fit to repudiate Mr. Durr's statements. Because one member of the commission has made derogatory remarks about the FBI's policy, it does not follow that Mr. Hoover, as a form of reprisal, is justified in withholding from the whole agency information that may prove to be highly useful. The role played by the FBI in protecting Government agencies against subversive elements is too important to permit sound procedural policies to be weakened for purely personal reasons.

Dewey's China

Coincidence sometimes adds up to policy. And the coincidence of a Dewey speech in behalf of "aid to China" and of a Vandenberg plea for the same cause appears to establish the existence of a Republican policy which, with Representative Judd as a spearhead, has succeeded in including China in the House committee's proposed recommendation on interim aid to Europe. The policy owes its origin, we suspect, to party and presidential politics; our China for your Europe, so to speak.

Far be it from us to suggest that the Senator from Michigan is afraid of incurring the "me, too" gibe. He is too big a man for that. Long ago he decided to give to the Nation (and to the whole free world) what he had hitherto given to his party. It is different with Governor Dewey. Unlike Senator Vandenberg, whose reference to China was fitted into a masterly argument for interim aid for Europe, Governor Dewey talked about China, and nothing but China. It appeared that, fearing the "me, too" gibe, he was simply bent upon making a contrast with Administration policy.

Both Governor Dewey and Senator Vandenberg said China, but they meant Chiang Kai-shek, head of the National government of China with headquarters in Nanking, who, intent on the control of all China, is locked in a struggle with the Communists. If the aid is voted, it would not be China or the Chinese that would be helped. And they know it. Nothing is more clearly destined to alienate the Chinese people from the United States than the arming and equipping of Chiang's armies. Resentment already is reported from China against the introduction of American presidential politics into Chinese affairs.

Nothing, either, is less likely to succeed in unifying China under the leadership of Chiang Kai-shek—indeed, under any leadership. Those who talk about the danger of the absorption of China by the Soviet Union are talking without the book. The Russians are sometimes stupid, but not that stupid. In 1927 they found that, in spite of control over the Chinese armies, they could not unify even the province of Canton, which, like a cushion, reverted to its old form as soon as the Russians and their Chinese armies had moved out of sight.

What our China aiders forget is that China is a unit only in its culture and its civilization. Politically the form of organization suitable for this great subcontinent of 500 million souls is federal, not unitary. After the war with Japan had ended, it was Chiang's cardinal error to try to unify China back of the shield provided by American troops when they took over the Japanese-vacated territory of China. And he demonstrated his lack of statesmanship by sending carpet-baggers as his deputies; they came to be just as much loathed as the Communists. In Manchuria, Chiang was so intent on unifying China under his control that he ignored the claims of the former Manchurian governor, Chang Hsueh-liang. For Formosa, formerly Japan's territory, he named an administration which made the people of Formosa long for the return of Japanese control.

Some of the Chiang aiders, Governor Dewey included, want money and goods to be sent to China, as well as arms. If they succeed, they ought to be forewarned that the money and goods would be bound to stick to middlemen's fingers, meaning the ruling clique in Nanking. That they would be used in accordance with any agreement is sheer illusion. The Nanking clique would neither carry out an agreement nor accept foreign direction, even suggestion. We have a military mission there, but Chiang Kai-shek takes not the slightest notice of them. At present there is no agency in China that we can work with or through for the benefit of China. A month ago Chiang banned the only progressive political group in China—namely, the Democratic League. In the circumstances the best course is to ride out the risk while the aid program for Europe is in course of fulfillment—instead of diverting our limited resources and, in the process, wasting money. We had thought that Congress was intent upon winding up "Operation Rathole" and the subsidizing of corrupt ruling cliques abroad under the banner of anticommunism.

Archbishop Ryan

The Catholic Church has not had many spokesmen in the United States more effective and influential or more generally respected by the members of other religious groups than the Most Rev. James H. Ryan, Archbishop of Omaha, long associated with the Catholic University here as a teacher of philosophy and later as rector. It is true that throughout his academic career in Washington, Archbishop Ryan was frequently confused in the popular mind with his elder and equally celebrated namesake, the late Msgr. John A. Ryan, head of the University's department of moral theology, whose essays and books on current political and social topics reached a very wide audience. This confusion, while it may have been at times embarrassing to both, was nevertheless natural enough, for the two churchmen were not dissimilar in temperament and represented almost identical points of view.

Both were, for example, supporters of the policies of the Roosevelt Administration, and both placed themselves openly in opposition to the doctrines and methods of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin at a time when that cleric had still a very considerable following among both clerics and laymen. It is said to have been at the request of Mr. Roosevelt and of Secretary Hull that Bishop Ryan and the Rev. Maurice S. Sheedy undertook their tour of the Latin-American capitals early in 1939, and it is certain that this tour was a considerable factor in creating the virtual unanimity of Latin-American support which Mr. Roosevelt received in his conflict with the Axis powers.

Archbishop Ryan's associations in Washington were renewed after his election in 1943 to the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, of which he subsequently became chairman. It is pleasant to recall that one of his last official actions in this capacity was a letter to The Washington Post in approval of an editorial called Faith and Freedom, published October 17. On that occasion Archbishop Ryan took the opportunity to make clear the position of his coreligionists concerning the constitutional separation of church and state. Catholics, he wrote, > accept . . . all the constitutional principles on which American democracy is based, including the separation of church and state as embodied in the first amendment. We see . . . the political wisdom of what you rightly call this "guarantee against governmental molestation of, or favoritism to, any religious sect"; and we regard its observance as a moral duty, binding on all citizens as on Government.

In all personal associations, Archbishop Ryan conducted himself with a grave, gentle and unfailing courtesy which was generally admired and which will be long remembered.

Ministers' Exemption

When the Supreme Court is called upon to decide whether or not a part-time missionary and house-to-house preacher is a minister of the Gospel, it has a very difficult and delicate task. It is not surprising that the court should divide, 5 to 4, on such a question, as it did in the cases of Wesley W. Cox, Theodore R. Thompson and Wilbur Roisum against the United States on Monday. The three men are Jehovah's Witnesses, who were classified as conscientious objectors under the Selective Service Act. All three claimed total exemption from the draft as ministers of religion. Being denied that classification, Messrs. Cox and Thompson left a civilian public service camp without permission and Mr. Roisum failed to return after proper leave. The court upheld their conviction.

Justices Douglas and Black dissented on the ground that Congress had exempted ministers whether or not their full time is given to religious service. Justices Murphy and Rutledge took a similar view. But both dissents give scant attention to the facts in the cases. Possibly the entire court would agree that some part-time ministers would be exempt. But Justice Reed, writing for the majority, points out that Thompson did not become a Jehovah's Witness until after the war broke out; that he did not claim to be a conscientious objector until after he had been classified 1-A, and did not assert he was a minister of religion until 10 days after his status as a conscientious objector had been recognized.

In the cases of the other two men, the available evidence indicated that they spent "only a small portion of their time in religious activities." In none of the cases was there evidence that the men were devoting their entire lives to the furtherance of religious work. While safeguarding the exemption privilege for "duly ordained ministers," the court also has an obligation to guard against the evasion of wartime service by men who make religious work only an avocation and others who seek any excuse to evade the duties of citizenship.

HEARTH WOOD

The burly oak, the ancient apple
That lived so long where the two roads turn,
Breaking the sun into golden dapple,
Today have come to the hearth to burn.

The red hawthorn, the sweet wild plum,
That faltered before the windy lash
Of a late spring, at last have come
Bare to the faggot, the flame the ash.

The gold still lingers in pith and bark,
The singing green, though changed and thinned,
Are song and blossom against the dark,
A flake of silver upon the wind.

Highest Awards

In an article describing the hearing before the Senate Investigating Committee a few days ago you quote Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers as stating that he received the Nation's two highest awards, the Distinguished Service Medal and the Legion of Merit, for his wartime services. This statement, of course, is entirely incorrect, as the two highest decorations which can be won by members of the United States Army are the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross. By statute, these two decorations can only be awarded for valor in combat with an armed enemy of the United States.

Simple justice to the recipients of the Medal of Honor (of whom about half gave their lives during World War II in performance of the acts for which they were decorated), and the Distinguished Service Cross dictates that some explanatory comment be published so as to eliminate any confusion that may have been created in the minds of your readers. Combat service is not a requirement for the award of the Distinguished Service Medal or the Legion of Merit, and in order of precedence they are placed third and fifth respectively on the Army's list of decorations.

I am certain that members of the Army and Navy Legion of Valor of the United States, whose sole qualification for membership is the possession of the Congressional Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross, or Navy Cross will appreciate your publishing a few lines to correct the injustice that has been done them by the remarks referred to above.

Fly In Ointment

It is regrettable that there is always a fly in the ointment. In the case of the extraordinary broadcast of the wedding of Princess Elizabeth the fly appeared when the tactless remark was made that the wedding couple was now passing by the tomb of Benedict Arnold "who was hanged as a spy during the American Revolution." What a time to bring that up!

I do not remember who made the remark but I would not be surprised if it was the same reporter who constantly referred to Westminster Abbey, as though he were referring to some Pacific Coast clergyman by the name of Abbey.

FBI Interviews

I have been interviewed several times by the FBI in connection with people who were being investigated and never has there been anything "furtive" about their procedure. Because files are kept confidential does not mean that the person investigated is suspect in any way. It is my personal belief that a loyal citizen has nothing to fear from the FBI as it is now run. It is only if we let the Communists take over and make it an NKVD that we need worry.

ERP Supplement

Congratulations on your splendid supplement of November 23, covering the European Recovery Program. This cooperative venture of the Foreign Policy Association and The Washington Post is another journalistic milestone in the formation of public opinion.

Washington Democracy

A recent special dispatch to the New York Times from Westwood, N. J., reports that the senior class of the local high school has decided not to make the customary spring trip to the Nation's Capital "unless Washington hotels agree to provide accommodations for three Negro girls in the class."

Here is a chance for people in Washington who disapprove of race prejudice to do something to prove their sincerity. We are writing to the high school principal, Dr. Charles Muschell, inviting one of the three girls to be our guest on next spring's tour. A couple of hundred similar invitations from Washingtonians would show members of the senior class that their stand in behalf of real democracy has the support of some Washingtonians at least.

Postoffice Hours

At 6 p. m. on week days and at 1 on Saturday all the postoffices are closed except the one next to Union Station.

I asked some postal employes how long that rule would be in effect, and they told me "until the Republicans get out of office. They have cut appropriations, trying to reduce taxes, until there is not money enough to keep the other postoffices open."

Yet I read in the papers that it is planned to raise the salaries of postal employes. And the poor taxpayer loses either way.

Rededication Week

I am an employe of the State Department, and have just been handed a memorandum announcing that we are celebrating Rededication Week. Rededication "to keeping the principles of freedom alive," it reads.

On the 20th I received the notice of Rededication . . . On the 24th I heard Mr. Steve Douglass declare his belief in the principles of freedom from prejudice on the gridiron . . . The Washington Post of November 25 tells me that "Women's Group Hits Report on Civil Rights as Misleading" and lists as inaccuracies the "inference that Washington practices Jim Crowism; that Negro schools here are inferior to white schools, and that Negroes are refused service in downtown restaurants" . . . Rededication Week . . . the Bill of Rights . . . no Jim Crow in Washington?

Please, Mr. Editor, give us a little coverage on these things; order the carrier boy to bang harder on my door at the next delivery. You see, I am not up to date on what's what about town!

Short Skirts

I wish to correct a mistake I made in a letter which appeared in The Washington Post of November 13 concerning a statement by Margaret Truman in regard to skirt lengths.

I said she favored the "knee-length skirt," but I meant to say she favored the "short skirt." There is quite a difference in appearance between the two. I'm sure Miss Truman is as glad to see the knee length disappear as the rest of us. My most profound apologies to her!

International Peasant Union

Miss Cynthia Lowry's Associated Press article in The Washington Post of November 16, on the internationals of the past and present is appreciated as a sign of intense interest in European politics. We are gratified by her opinion on the importance of the International Peasant Union. However, we feel our duty to point out some erroneous evaluations of the ideological aspects of our organization and of the peasant movements in general.

1. The peasant movements, guarding the traditions, language, religion, and national spirit of their ancestors, have their own ideology, which rejects Marxism and communism. As we stated in our Independence Day Declaration on July 4: "We have been and continue to be decided opponents of all ideologies with totalitarian and dictatorial tendencies."

Firmly convinced of the spiritual and moral values, we respect the needs of both the human soul and body. Therefore, we consider that the Utopian slogans of the promised Marxist-Communist heaven will not save the life of our starving countrymen. Our organizations are democratic without any kind of adjective and do not conceive of class limitation. In spite of the fact that in our countries the peasants constitute the overwhelming majority, we do not want to establish a dictatorship of this majority.

2. The peasant movements are eager to eliminate the last remnants of feudal privilege, but they are equally determined to fight against the imposition of new exclusive privilege for the benefit of any social or political group. Even though they want to assure to everyone a fair share in the benefits of production, their whole economic philosophy is based on private property and free and cooperative enterprise. In our Independence Day Declaration we stated: "We are agreed that the necessary reconciliation of the individual and social interests is attainable only by free cooperativism, and therefore we are opposed to the general collectivizations and cooperatives imposed by force and carried to the point of reducing the population to slavery and pauperism."

3. The International Peasant Union, consequently, is not the ideological heir of the Second International, inspired by Karl Marx. It is the result of the common aspirations and common fate of the peasants, oppressed by terror and social injustices.

It is being recognized by every sound man that in the present world truly constructive aims can be achieved only by international collaboration. On the other hand, Communist aggression and conspiracy, akin to the Fascist brands are international in scope. The necessity of opposing to the negative aims of the totalitarian doctrines the positive character of our principles and our agrarian solidarity induced us to establish as soon as possible the International Peasant Union as a strong organized force, in the fight for the survival of freedom and civilization.

Streamlined Thanksgiving

By Malvina Lindsay

End To Gluttony

TODAY there is an unseen guest at my table, one of the millions in want throughout the world—perhaps one of the five million children in Europe recently reported suffering from acute undernourishment.

Because of this I trust:

That I shall not rise from the table with that overstuffed feeling that has so long been hailed as a virtue on American feast days.

That I shall not see anyone letting out a belt or releasing a zipper as a testimonial to gluttony, or waddling from dining to living room to spend an afternoon or evening heavy bodied and dull witted, struggling to keep awake.

That I shall be spared the sight of what was long sentimentally admired as a "groaning board," but which now has become an anachronism and a digestive peril in a largely nonagricultural society without exacting physical demands, and without holiday challenge to carry wood or coal for fires, feed poultry and livestock, milk cows.

THAT whoever is my hostess or guest will look upon a cluttered menu with as much disapproval as on a cluttered dress or room, and will consider it both bad taste and bad morals to serve two kinds of potatoes or a double dessert—followed by candy, nuts, stuffed dates, figs, raisins, bananas, oranges, grapes and apples.

That my plate after everything is passed or served will not be a mountain of indistinguishable foods, and my dining from thereon will not be a merry-go-round of interruptions as additional helpings—together with celery, olives, carrot sticks, jelly, piccalilli, cottage cheese, spiced peaches—are urged upon me.

That I won't be confronted with servings of more than I can eat because "after all, this is Thanksgiving" and I am expected to express my spiritual thanks by overloading my body; that if food is not passed by servants or in family style, plate servings will conform to the national appeal initiated by the Washington Ethical Society—one-half pound or less per person instead of the customary three-fourths pound or more; that the general practice of hostesses will be smaller first servings, second ones if necessary, thus decreasing the usual waste of uneaten food at the American table (especially at big dinners)—a waste estimated in upper and middle class homes as 5 to 10 per cent of consumption.

THAT I shall remember in my ordering and eating what unnecessary expenditures do to the inflated economy of this country and the world, and that a Thanksgiving dinner this year costs more than last year.

That I shall be spared reminiscence over "old-time dinners" since most of us have gotten over our sentimental yearning for the way grandma did everything, and our childish nostalgia for the days when a holiday board included ham, chicken and turkey, half-a-dozen kinds of pies and cakes.

That I shall realize that too much pastry leads to logginess and brain fag as well as to cutting down on the wheat so urgently needed by people facing breadless winters.

That most of us will plan or eat, whether in homes or restaurants, dinners in keeping with the spirit of the day, emphasizing modern nutritional knowledge and the abundant foods that cannot be shipped to those in want, leaving out as much as possible foods based upon wheat or its products.

That there will be less gorging than usual, less use of "bicarb," fewer headaches, especially by the already well-fed on whom the main part of the food-saving program rests, and that there will be enough restraint, by adults at least, at every meal to make possible the equivalent of one meal for a hungry, absent guest somewhere in the world.

Exeter Cathedral

It may be that many officers and enlisted men of your Army, Navy and Air Force who were stationed in Devonshire, have visited Exeter and seen—and even worshipped in—our beautiful old "Cathedral Church of Saint Peter in Exeter."

We Devonshire folk are proud of and love our cathedral, and I, as a former regular Devonshire Regiment officer have been given the task of raising funds to restore the fabric so greviously damaged in the blitz-bombing of Exeter in April and May, 1942.

The work of restoration is proceeding and its cost of completion is estimated at 75,000 pounds toward which we have received or been promised 40,000 pounds, leaving a somewhat large gap of 35,000 pounds to be found.

The cathedral dates from the year 932; thus this ancient and dignified old edifice has now reached its 1015th year. The first Bishop, Leofric, was enthroned by Edward the Confessor in 1050. The Norman portion was consecrated in 1133 and the Gothic part as it stands today was finished in 1369.

One cannot help mentioning one spontaneous and moving service in the cathedral, and those who attended it will never forget it. I, as garrison adjutant, arranged the parade portion and got together many personnel of United States Army and Navy of both sexes for the memorial service to your late President and Commander-in-Chief, attended in state by His Worship, the Mayor of Exeter. My regimental band played as the organ was out of action through bomb damage.

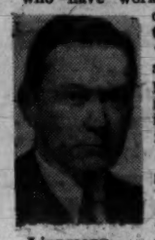
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Not Relief But Recovery



BECAUSE nothing like the Marshall Plan has ever been attempted before, even the men who have worked on it, and certainly the rest of us who must describe it and explain it, have great difficulty in understanding it.

Lippmann

The point of greatest difficulty is, I think, the difference between the European Recovery Program on the one hand, and on the other, wartime lend lease and postwar relief. They look alike. The new program, like the previous ones, calls for large appropriations and a heavy draft upon American resources.

Nevertheless, it is most necessary that we keep in mind the radical difference between relief and the recovery program which, once interim aid has been provided, we shall be considering. For otherwise it will have no chance of being in fact a recovery program. It will be merely another installment of relief. The object of a recovery program is to put an end to the need for relief.

A CONCRETE, and perhaps the most practical way, to bring out the difference between recovery and relief, is to show why Congress should not confine its appropriations of dollars to a program of specific exports from the United States. If this were a relief program, it would be natural enough to appropriate only the dollars needed to buy the exports which can be made available in the United States.

But since it is a recovery program, dollars are needed not only for that but also to promote production outside the United States. For only if and as production is increased outside the United States, can the necessity for aid from the United States be diminished.

THEREFORE, we must not say, as many do, that while the participating countries at Paris estimated their need for food and fertilizer at 5.2 billions, and that as we can make available only 3.6 billions of these commodities, therefore the appropriations can be cut accordingly. To reason that way is to forget that there are other countries which could produce the food and fertilizer we are unable to supply, and that it is most necessary to induce and to help them to do so. Dollars will induce and will help them to do so. Those dollars will, to be sure, eventually be spent in the United States. But not necessarily on food, which is in short supply. The extra dollars may be spent for many other kinds of goods of which our supplies are larger or can readily be expanded, and these goods will promote the production of the food which we cannot export.

The extra dollars we provide—that is to say the dollars which we cannot allow other countries to use here for food and other scarce goods—are nevertheless essential to the recovery program. For it is those extra dollars which will stimulate production elsewhere in countries where the peasants, let us say, want to buy not food or coal but perhaps shirts and shoes. The extra dollars alone can promote that multilateral trade without which a world recovery is impossible.

IF WE confine our contribution to the dollars that can be spent here for the specific items which the European countries need, we shall be condemning them and ourselves to continuing indefinitely the present abnormal relationship. We shall be perpetuating, not ending, the need of relief. We shall be instituting a permanent international dole.

All that the European countries can then get out of us is what we can afford to export. They will be denied the very kind of help which alone can free them and us from excessive dependence upon our exports. For what they must have from us is not merely our wheat and coal and fertilizers but also dollars,—which will cause other countries to produce and to sell to them wheat and coal and fertilizers and the like.

THERE IS no danger to our economy in providing more dollars than can be spent here for commodities which are in short supply. By the use of export controls and allocations we can protect our own supplies, and prevent the extra dollars from exerting inflationary pressure on those American markets where the demand exceeds the supply. The extra dollars can be diverted to other American markets where the supply is adequate, where there are goods available which many countries need in order to increase their incentives and to find the means to produce more.

IF WE limit our contribution of dollars to the purchase of specific commodities in the United States, we shall, quite unintentionally of course, become more and more entangled in a system of internationally regimented, directed and planned trade. Though we wish to avoid just that, though we believe that a free economy is much the best, we shall be going in the opposite direction. We shall be binding the foreign trade of the leading countries of Europe to a system of planned and directed American exports. Inevitably in administering this program we shall become involved in the whole infinitely complex and increasingly unworkable European system of government procurement, allocation, rationing and price fixing.

If, therefore, we really believe in the superiority of free markets over a regimented collectivism, we shall not limit our contribution to the dollars that can be spent here on urgently needed but scarce goods. We shall give great emphasis to that element of the European recovery program which calls for free dollars—for dollars to be used in stimulating world trade as a whole.

Baby Doctors Urged to Look For Signs of Allergic Trends

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 26.—Baby doctors were told here today they can save their patients much of the sniffling, sneezing, itching discomforts of later life if they search out allergic trends in infancy.

"Pediatricians are in a key position to recognize allergic tendencies and properly care for them," Dr. W. Ambrose McGee of Richmond, Va., told physicians here at the final day session of the forty-first annual meeting, Southern Medical Association.

Dr. McGee reported out his observations of a special study of allergies in infants, inculding a continuing survey of 150 babies under one year of age.

Results Are Outlined

Among other things, he found:

1. That some allergies show themselves before birth of the child. He cited numerous cases of fetal hiccoughs, which he said can be relieved by changing the mother's diet.

2. That infants up to six months of age are "full of allergy," much of which can be routed out indefinitely by proper treatment.

3. That allergy afflictions can change the personality of a child, even to the point where the child "becomes a candidate for psychiatry."

4. That if both parents are allergic, the child will likely be so, too; if only one parent is allergic, the child has a 50-50 chance of escaping the affliction.

Orange Juice Distasteful

In his studies, Dr. McGee also found that spinach is not the most thoroughly disliked food of infants. Orange juice is. Boiled milk comes second, and spinach third, he said.

Strong dislike for a food is not a sure sign the child is allergic to it, Dr. McGee said. But, he cautioned the pediatricians, a child's continuing resentment towards a certain food bears careful study.

Among the more obvious signs of allergy in infancy, Dr. McGee said, are rubbing the nose frequently, sniffling and throat clearing. A child with a pronounced overbite, or fish mouth, is very likely an allergic child, he declared.

He advised pediatricians to test their patients with single vitamins and foods, leaving a reasonable waiting period after ingestion to determine their effects. Such tests, he said, have shown that infantile reactions to foods are foreshadows of chemical allergy in later life.

Adrenal Trouble Possible

Dr. Beach M. Chenoweth, jr., associate professor of pediatrics, University of Alabama, Birmingham, told the same session that, rare as the cases may be, pediatricians should consider possible maladjustment of the adrenal glands in sickly, emaciated infants. Besides determining sex, he said, the glands control absorption of salt into the blood, and malfunctioning in this regard means death unless prompt treatment is given.

Dr. L. H. Mousel, clinical professor of anesthesiology, George Washington University School of Medicine, Washington, told another medical section that anesthetists should "become thoroughly familiar with operation procedures" since their mistakes may cost the patient's life.

A plea for State aid to general practitioners in rural areas was made here today by Dr. Steve Paschal Kenyon, president of the Medical Association of Georgia. Declaring that rural, visiting doctors are "approaching the vanishing point," Doctor Kenyon proposed that States guarantee such "needed physicians" a minimum annual income. He also proposed that nurses' aid courses be added to high school curricula.

Waymack Fears New Effort To Impose Atomic Censorship

Chicago, Nov. 26 (Spl.).—Atomic Energy Commissioner W. W. Waymack said today that attempts might be made to impose still further censorship on atomic matters, and to return control of the new power to the military services.

Speaking before the Illinois Welfare Association, Waymack cited censorship and military control of atomic energy as two of several questions which he believed were coming into focus as the country gained more experience with the subject. These questions, he asserted, must be decided by the people through democratic processes.

Present Procedure Indorsed

He pointed out that wide public discussion had preceded the passage of the Federal law which places atomic matters in civilian hands, and that this procedure was indorsed by the last two Secretaries of War. Nevertheless, he said, "This question might conceivably rise again."

"If it does," he continued, "people will ask themselves: 'What are the reasons behind our American tradition of top civilian control? Are these reasons valid with respect to atomic energy?'"

Waymack said that another foreseeable issue, "the right of the people to information" has already been raised in some quarters.

"I should not be surprised," he declared, "if at some time the question of some kind of censorship which is beyond the present provisions of the Atomic Energy Act were proposed . . . The American people, who want national security fully served, will not want that need used to deny them knowledge which does not compromise security. There are signs that the American press is getting restive about this."

He warned that "in the name of security, real security could be lost" by officious and over-strict censorship.

The maximum of national security is really based, he argued, "upon a wise balance between secrecy and progress, between a short-range reliance on denying knowledge of our past achievements to any potential enemy and a long-term reliance on learning more things faster than any potential enemy learns them."

Warning of the dangers that come from Government control, Waymack said:

"There must be no stifling of the scientific spirit, no weakening but indeed a strengthening of the pure search for more knowledge, no intolerable regimenting, no drifting into a situation in which Government is the boss and our great educational institutions lose the independence which makes them great."

Thanksgiving Summing-Up

CHICAGO.—We are far enough away from the 1920s so that the antics of that time seem fondly quaint. It is the current fashion to exploit that quaintness. Short skirts, speakeasies, the Charleston, flappers and bathtub gin—it is all being reminiscently served up with trimmings, reminding us how cute we were in those far-off days. But the cuteness to one side, there were certain phenomena of the '20s that should cause us in our time to stop, look and listen.

CHILDS

As the big bubble of that earlier day swelled to opalescent brilliance, uneasy voices were raised in doubt. Teachers, preachers and plain citizens, more thoughtful than their fellows, began to talk about the materialism of the jazz age and to question the values of a civilization that put so much stress on getting and spending—on the great god Success.

Now and then today, you hear echoes of those same doubts. Perhaps Thanksgiving is as good a time as any other to stop short in the midst of our new jet-propelled prosperity and to ask some searching questions about directions and goals.

AS IN THE OTHER boom, all our holidays tend to become Roman holidays. The crowd in the football stadium is bigger than ever before, the traffic jam is longer, the motor horns more raucous and the glint of the whisky flasks brighter in the late afternoon sun.

The cars are brighter and more varicolored than in the quaint yesterday of the '20s. They make the high, wide and handsome automobiles of that other prosperity look as foolish as the old model T Ford.

There is more radio, and on the radio there are snappier wisecracks and far more of them. Television is heralded as the great end-all and be-all, just as radio was in its infancy.

The present boom seems to have much more substance than the great flash that ended with a bang in 1929. Nothing like the fanning out of installment buying has yet occurred.

Yet we should not ignore certain portents. Retail food prices in September hit a record high. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the cost of living went up another 2 per cent for moderate-income families. Prices are now approximately 164 per cent of the 1935-1939 average.

This should serve to remind us that not everyone is sharing the current prosperity. A large sector—salaried workers, those living on fixed incomes and pensions—are feeling the bitter pinch of inflated prices. This is responsible in considerable part for the mounting tension in the air.

Just as in 1928 and 1929, the competition for getting and spending seems to override everything else. What it comes down to, perhaps, is a sense of values.

SO MANY of the old values have gone by the board. Thanksgiving in the past was never a Roman holiday, not the massed roar of thousands in a football stadium. It was literally a day for giving thanks to God for having brought His people through the trials and tribulations of the year that was ending.

It is easy to talk about values. It is quite another thing to consider how they shall be built into a society so vigorously and completely preoccupied with the world of things.

Europeans are fond of hurling the charge of the materialism at us. The charge comes unjustly from Europe in the ashes of its own materialism. A deep strain of idealism has long been one of the most important elements of American character. Europe has often been the beneficiary of that idealism, as it is today.

But this time the contrast between the surface flash of our prosperity and the despair and misery of the rest of the world is very great. Only a little restraint would make available most of what is required to meet the crisis needs for food, fuel and clothing.

If Government cannot impose the restraints, because of our political divisions on the eve of an election year, then somehow we must find the necessary self-restraint. The discipline which that means would help to restore in us a sense of proportion and of moderation.

"What is a man profited if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Nations as well as men have souls that are lost or won.

Truman Is Awarded Medal For Hemisphere Unity Work

President Truman said yesterday the welfare of the world now "is tied up with and depends on the solidarity of the Western Hemisphere."

He made the statement to a delegation from the Pan American Society of the United States which presented him with a gold medal and scroll in recognition of his "contributions to inter-American friendship and unity."

"If we can maintain our present friendly relations with all the republics in the Western Hemisphere," Mr. Truman said in accepting the medal, "I don't think we will have nearly as much trouble in settling the affairs of the Eastern Hemisphere, for which we are also responsible to a very large extent."

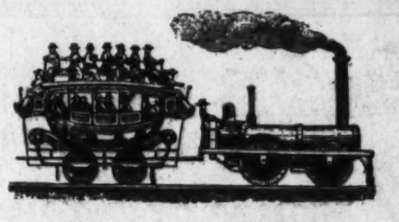
The President said the honor is one he will value and keep all his life. He said he will have it framed and put on the wall in the White House where it can be seen by all visitors.

Thomas W. Palmer, president of the society, which has headquarters in New York, made the presentation in the President's office.

Mr. Truman is the third American Chief Executive to receive the medal. The others were Herbert Hoover and the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The scroll said:

"In the sincere good will which you have manifested in the Washington representatives of our sister American republics, and in your visits to Mexico and Brazil, the society recognizes that you have performed a service of inestimable and abiding value to inter-American solidarity."



CLEAR THE TRACKS
FOR THE FREEDOM TRAIN

The timely arrival of the Freedom Train in the Nation's Capital on Thanksgiving Day reminds us that our freedom is older than the first locomotive . . . that we must not allow it to become obsolete. We in America, who still enjoy the Four Freedoms, have good reason to celebrate Thanksgiving Day; but if we are to preserve our proud heritage of individual and collective liberty, we must acknowledge the truth that the world cannot long continue "half slave, half free."

Let us, then, thankfully safeguard our freedom by sharing its benefits with all mankind.

Chicago Newspapers Continue to Publish As Printers Walkout Spreads to Hammond

Chicago, Nov. 26 (AP).—A strike of more than 1500 Chicago area printers spread t osuburban Hammond, Ind., today, resulting in the printers spread to suburban Hammond Times, but Chicago's six big daily newspapers continued publication by a photo-engraving poeess.

The Hammond Daily newspaper was one of eight smaller Chicago area publications served yesterday with demands by local 16 of the AFL Chicago Typographical Union to boost immediately salaries of day workers $14.50 weekly and night and "lobster" shift workers $15 weekly.

Five of the smaller publications said they would meet the demands and the remaining two, the Chicago Defender and the Drovers' Journal have not reached a final decision. The Drovers' Journal, said it had submitted a counter proposal which had not been answered.

Lead to Walkout

The union's demand to the eight smaller publications was the same which led to the strike Monday night on the six big dailies. The union wanted the wage hike immediately "pending further negotiations" on other issues. The six dailies, members of the Chicago Newspaper Publishers Association, replied they were willing to discuss wage proposals within the framework of a contract but that the union had adopted a no-contract policy because of the Taft-Hartley law.

Under contracts that expired October 21 with the Chicago Publishers Association and the eight smaller publications, day printers received $85.50 for a 36¼-hour work week and night and lobster shirt workers $91 weekly. The night shift workers have a 36¼-hour week and lobster shift workers a 30-hour week.

Some to Meet Demands

Publications which said they would meet the wage demands even though no contract is agreed on are the Bulletin Record Co., a racing information paper; the Abendpost, a German language paper; the Daily Racing Form, Life Printing and Publishing Co., which publishes community papers, and the Illinois Sports News.

The big dailies, which are printing photo-engraved reproductions of typewriter lettering and figures, are the Tribune, Sun, News, Herald-American, Times and Journal of Commerce.

A few pickets continued parading at these newspaper plants but members of other craft unions were reporting for work as usual, the managements said. There were no disorders reported.

There were no reports of hostility between the pickets and members of other crafts remaining on the job.

The Chicago newspapers have contracts with 21 other craft unions.

Spokesmen for some of the larger unions remaining on the job said their men were working because of their contract obligations.

"We have a contract that doesn't expire until December 31 and we're living up to our contract," said an unidentified spokesman for the Chicago Printing Pressmen's Union, Local No. 3.

U. S. Cites Venezuelan In Gun Case

Augusta, Ga., Nov. 26 (AP).—The Federal prosecution sought to establish today that Karl J. Eisenhardt, one of four defendants in a machine-gun theft trial, was working with a former President of Venezuela to overthrow the provisional government of that South American republic.

The prosecution introduced a statement attributed to Edward Browder, jr., another defendant, saying he understood "some good friends in the State Department" and representatives of the Dominican Republic and Colombia also were involved in the movement.

The evidence was given in rebuttal of defense testimony that instead of being stolen from nearby Bush Field in April, as is charged, some 21 Navy machine guns were purchased there with Dominican Republic funds to help stem a Communist revolt.

Actually the machine guns got no farther than the basement of Eisenhardt's palatial home near Ellicott City, Md., where FBI agents seized them April 21.

They were flown from Augusta to Baltimore by Browder and Eisenhardt in a B25, one of several planes which Eisenhardt said he also bought in this country for the Dominican government.

Eisenhardt and Browder had testified that the move against the Dominican government, which was thwarted in September, was plotted in Cuba and financed through Romulo Betancourt, provisional president of Venezuela.

The rebuttal statement was put in by John Calvin Rice, FBI agent at Oklahoma City. He said Browder gave it to him and John W. Henderson, a fellow agent, after arrest of Browder and Eisenhardt at Clinton, Okla., April 23.

Defense counsel objected to the statement, but Presiding Judge Frank M. Scarlett ordered it read.

Browder said on the witness stand earlier that "false information given him by the FBI agents so confused him that he did not know what was in the statement.

Eisenhardt, 50, lives at Ellicott City, Md. He is head of a large oil transportation firm with headquarters at York, Pa.

Browder, 30, is a former Canadian Air Force flier. His home is at Amarillo, Tex.

One of the Great Historical Novels of Our Time!

TAKE three brothers and two sisters of an old Virginia family, loyal Confederates, and in the first hard pinch of the War for Southern Independence let them learn that their father was also the grandfather of Abraham Lincoln. Tell the effect of that disclosure upon the character of each one.

Tell a story not of soldiers but of Southern civilians; paint the ignorant boasting, the greedy ambition, the complacent arrogance and the secret sense of inferiority which are the soil in which the seeds of war most easily thrive; portray the patient valor of the simple man and the covetous rapacity and the sly evasions of the shrewd; present war as it is and was and always will be, as a bestial murder of fine generations yet unborn, as a disease from which, win or lose, no nation ever recovers.

The result is a novel which can face comparison with the great works of our time. Because of its sustained interest most readers are sorry when they come to the end of this great story.

Chest Agency Aids Child Development

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

A large number of persons doesn't know about it, and when they do find out, they are so impressed they think there ought to be more of it.

But there's no drama in it, and it doesn't tear your heart out to think about it.

For "it" is preventive, rather than curative. It is the Habit Clinic of the Child Welfare Society, and its clients are well children. The object of the clinic is to be sure that the well child develops along normal, happy, emotional and social lines.

The idea on which the clinic is based is that the child's patterns of behavior are set at a very early age. And clinic personnel observe the child in this crucial period and watch him as he meets the first problems of his life—proper toilet training, relationship with his own family.

Through Several Stages

This goes through several stages in a case where a child is born into a family where there aready is another child, the mother must be careful to make a painess adjustment with the older child, so that he will understand that he is not being deprived of her affection because of the "new baby," but simply that he must share his mother with her other child.

In the case of an only child, the adjustments start with proper feeding habits, and continue with toilet training. The necessity of waiting until the child is ready for such training is stressed. It is part of the business he must learn of doing things for himself. When the child is 18 months old, his development as an individual is checked in an interview by Mrs. Emma C. Gilbert, clinic psychologist, with both mother and baby.

If this development is satisfactory, then an appointment is made for the child to become part of a small play group. He is observed in his relationships with other children of his age group. At the same time, there is group teaching for mothers of the children who are learning their first lesson in social relations.

The mother can see what normal behavior for a child's group is. If need be, there is an individual conference to straighten out any behavior difficulties which might appear to be developing.

When the child reaches three years of age, he is given a test which indicates his development, and the direction in which help might advantageously be given to assure him of mental health.

At the age of five, the child is given a school readiness test to determine whether he is equipped socially and emotionally to enter school. If the test results show that he needs further training, parents are advised to postpone school for a year until such training can be given.

But when it comes to assaying the merits of the clinic, it is almost impossible to say just how much good is done. No one can say how many temper tantrums were prevented, or how many behavior difficulties might have arisen, or how many children might have been too strongly introverted had they not attended the clinic.

Parents Unable to Pay

The program of health protection and supervision offered in the Habit Clinic and in the Child Welfare Center generally is open to children living in the Northwest section of Washington whose parents are unable to pay a private physician for this type of service. This includes families whose budget would not allow for the service of a private physician except in cases of illness.

The Center is sponsored by the Child Welfare Society, a private organization, and operates at Children's Hospital. About half of its budget comes from the Community Chest. In addition to mental hygiene services offered at the clinic, the Center also has an immunization clinic which protects against diphtheria and smallpox, a nutrition service, home visiting by public health nurses, and medical and nursing conferences for infants and preschool children.

And the Child Welfare Society is one of the Community Chest Federation member agencies which you help to support with your contribution to their campaign.

Leaders Ask Final 30% Chest Effort

Two District leaders appealed to Washingtonians yesterday to help push the 1948 Community Chest Federation campaign to success.

As solocitors girded to obtain the final 30 per cent needed to meet the $3,900,000 quota, special Thanksgiving Day messages were issued by Senator C. Douglas Buck (R., Del.), chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen, professor of philosophy at Catholic University.

"Unless public services are assisted by Chest agencies," Senator Buck warned, "the entire community suffers."

Among the "highest motives driving men forward are those arising in selflessness and the urge to help other people," the legislator said. "The campaign of the Community Chest Federation now in progress . . . represents the spirit of selflessness in our community."

Manager Sheen warned that "without our giving, those in need would lack food for their stomachs, clothes for their backs and roofs for their heads."

The spiritual leader said that "If we did not give, we would be without charity in our hearts, friendliness in our souls, and the blessing of God on our lives." He described "our needs," therefore, as being "greater than theirs" and said these needs can be "relieved only by supplying the needs of others."

The Chest campaign, to obtain funds for 125 Red Feather agencies, has recorded contributions totaling $2,717,313.81.

Campaign Chairman Edward H. Foley, jr., in a brief message to residents of the National Capital area, said:

"Before we sit down to a holiday dinner on Thanksgiving Day, I suggest we remain ourselves, here in the Nation's Capital, that our ability to serve our neighbors without compulsion is among the many things we possess in a measure enjoyed by few others. I suggest we give meaning to our Thanksgiving by giving first to the Community Chest."

The next report meeting of the campaign will be held at 12:15 p. m., December 2, at the Burlington Hotel.

Sharecropper Self-Help Plan Described by Southern Priest

Lafayette, La., Nov. 26 (AP).—A rural priest who is establishing Mississippi sharecroppers on 100-acre farms on their own described his work today as the National Catholic Rural Life Conference convention here held its closing sessions.

The Rev. Andrew Lawrence, superior of a mission at Camden, Miss., conducted by the Missionary Servants of the Most Holy Trinity, said he and his associates were preparing 100 children of sharecropper families, most of them Negroes and 90 per cent of them non-Catholics, for life on farms they will purchase with the mission's assistance.

Since the mission's agriculture school opened in 1944, he said, 14 families have been helped to acquire their own farms.

The school begins practical farming courses for both boys and girls in the fifth grade, Father Lawrence said. By the time students graduate from high school, he added, they have earned enough from farm work at the mission, poultry and livestock projects, to make the down payment on 10 acres, to be acquired outright within three years. Then the mission helps them start acquiring a 100-acre farm with a permanent home.

The mission supervisor said there was no compulsory training in Catholicism but that all students, who live with their families, were required to attend church—any church—every Sunday.

Your Table is Set with Freedom

Thanksgiving dinner is more than an American custom this year . . . it's a feast that could be celebrated ONLY in America! Thanks to CONTINUED Freedom . . . the supreme asset enjoyed by so few countries through the past decade. It's only the continued liberty of growing what we want; speaking what each of us believe to be right; and worshipping according to our beliefs, that produces a Nation able to keep its tables full.

Let us give more than a moment of reverence . . . more than a brief Grace . . . in Thanksgiving. Add a prayer for Peace based on Freedom—and the ability to keep minds and bodies healthfully nourished the years 'round—THE WORLD OVER.

Kaye's Always Comic

But Mr. Mitty's A Different Man

By Richard L. Coe

'THE SECRET LIFE OF WALTER MITTY,' at Keith's may not be Thurber but it is good fun. Danny Kaye disports himself in this one and there is a pack of good laughs.

Kaye is grandly funny in many of those Thurber dream sequences. At one point he's Gaylord Mitty, the coolest gambler on the mighty Mississippi—reeking with Southern charm and twanging with atmosphere music. It's a perfect take off of "The Foxes of Harrow."

In another dream he's Commander Mitty of the RAF, speaking in clipped British accent and volunteering for action beyond the call of dut-e.

And in another dream he manages a brief burlesque of horse opera, brushing away chairs or whatever else the villain may throw at him.

There's no doubt about it, Kaye is one of our shrewdest, most gifted comics, whether he's embarking on these amusing day dreams or tussling with a chair in one hand, while holding a teacup in another.

For all that, "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" isn't the inspired picture it might have been. By this we don't mean it should have stuck to James Thurber's brief original. That would have been impossible. The two mediums are, if you'll pardon a profundity, a trifle dissimilar; you simply can't make a feature film out of a short story in which the hero does nothing but dream while his wife is having her hair done. (Is the professor clearly understood? He feels pretty sappy at this point.)

"THE SECRET LIFE OF WALTER Mitty." RKO release of a Sam Goldwyn production. Directed by Norman McLeod. Screenplay by Ken Englund and Everett Freeman from the short story by James Thurber. Technicolor by Kalmus. Score by David Raskin, with two songs by Sylvia Fine, "Symphony for Unstrung Tongues" and "Anatole of Paris." At Keith's.

The Daydreams Pale

So what happens in the picture? It turns out that Mitty's dreams pale by comparison with his real life. He seems to be a pretty nicely treated copyreader in one of those publishing houses which put out magazines of adventure, horror and luuuve. He gets mixed up with an international plot to steal the royal and national treasures of Holland. While this is all very well in an ordinary Harold Lloyd sort of way, it's a far cry from the treatment Thurber's original idea might have had.

Ken Englund, who wrote the screen play with Everett Freeman, has said: "If our story was mild and only a contrast to the dreams and if—God forbid—the dreams didn't come off, we would be putting all our eggs in one basket and, in a burlesque comedian's parlance, we would lay an omelet."

"Mom" Is Fay Bainter

But the contrast between drab reality and lively daydreams was Thurber's delightful idea. In so candidly admitting the fear that the dreams would not be enough to carry the picture, Englund puts the spotlight on our films' greatest failing—fear of originality. As a result, what might have been an inspired comedy becomes good only in an uninspired way.

Producer Goldwyn has given the film his customary lavish touch. The Technicolored people and costumes are enormously fetching to watch. Danny sings several songs by his wife Sylvia Fine, one about a musician, another about the hat designer. They're fine in their way, but they don't seem to fit into the character the confused script-writers are trying to create.

While the supporting players are fine, they, too, have been forced into exaggeration. Fay Bainter, as Kaye's mother, manages to suggest Philip Wylie's "Momism" despite the farcical tricks she's made to pull. Virginia Mayo's adaptability to Technicolor is utterly beautiful and Florence Bates lends her august presence. And Reginald Denny is just right in his brief appearance as the RAF commandant.

There's no doubt that everyone will enjoy "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty." The only drawback is the rich, wry film it might have been.

A Four-Million-Dollar Yawn

The Setting Is New Zealand, And Film Belongs Down Under

"Green Dolphin Street," or "How Love Was Born Through a Slip of the Pen," is at the Palace. This incredible piece of claptrap is rather a depressing example of what havoc the mathematical approach can mean to the movies.

The picture has everything to arithmetical perfection—romance, poverty, wealth, violence in nature and in man, respect for the Roman Church, death, childbirth and masses of people.

Metro has proudly discovered through its research organization that "92 per cent of its New York audiences vote it very good or excellent." While Metro must be very pleased with such skill at calculating, the reflection on New York's educational system is nothing less than staggering. Unless, of course, its research department is generalmeyerzing the figgers.

For to call this puppet-like, unbelievable, sycophantic, cloying yarn "very good or excellent" is pompous idiocy.

The Slip of the Pen

We are asked to believe that a young man living in New Zealand has written back to a family in Britain which has befriended him that he'd like to marry Marianne when he really meant to write her sister's name, Marguerite. After endless torments, including an uprising of the Maori natives and a massive earthquake that shatters everything but Lana Turner's makeup kit, we are supposed to believe that all was for the best—that the unsought bride is a far finer love match than the shy younger sister the boy originally wanted to marry.

What happens, you ask, to the sister left maiden by this slip of a far-off pen? Hers is a sad plight. She's left alone in the tiny Channel island town which all the principals call home. Her parents die within minutes of each other. Brooding by herself along a beach of happier memories, she does manage to scrabble up a rocky smugglers' cove into the care of some nuns. Yes, Marguerite embraces the church, a dramatic device of long usage.

Meanwhile, down in New Zealand Marianne (Lana) has become disgusted with the terrors of logging in the mountains, where earthquakes are likely to upset her coiffure as well as the birth of her child. So she talks Hero Richard Hart into going down to the South Island and raising sheep. It doesn't say here that it was Lana who brought sheep-raising to New Zealand, but the impression is carefully nurtured by the success of their move. Within two years they've built up the snappiest home (French decor) in Dunedin, a house, our Kiwi friends tell us, that would be mighty impressive in Dunedin today, let alone in the nineteenth century.

No Expense Spared!

No, you can't say Metro has spared any greenbacks in fashioning this ambulatory yarn. It's very handsomely done indeed, from the three-masted "Green Dolphin" to that shattering earthquake.

The cast is high-priced, but only Gladys Cooper can be said to act. She gives the corny deathbed scene a semblance of her skill. Even the usually reliable Van Heflin is rather swept away, and Edmund Gwenn is, too. The romantic trio of Lana, Hart and Donna Reed might as well be playing charades.

The over-all impression of this four-million-dollar epic isn't half as much fun as these things sometimes can be in their woozy preening. "Green Dolphin Street" is just discouragingly dull. R. L. C.

"GREEN DOLPHIN STREET." M-G-M release produced by Carey Wilson. Directed by Victor Saville. Screenplay by Samson Raphaelson from the novel by Elizabeth Goudge. Music by Bronislaw Kaper. At the Palace.

White House Aide Calls for Complete List Of Army, Air Officer Disability Discharges

Maj. Gen. Harry Vaughan, President Truman's military aide, has called for a complete list of all Army and Air Force officers given disability discharges since the end of the war.

The request was made following the revelation that retired Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers under fire as a result of an investigation by the Senate War Investigating Subcommittee, has been receiving tax-free disability retirement pay of $549 a month. Air Secretary W. Stuart Symington announced on Tuesday, however, that the pay had been stopped and Meyers had been stripped of his military decorations.

Vaughan's call for the list of disability-retired officers went to the Office of Defense Secretary James E. Forrestal and the list is now in preparation. There has been some talk in official circles of a proposal that the income tax exemption of such retirement pay be wiped out.

Grand Jury Action On Meyers Is Delayed

By the United Press

Grand jury action on perjury indictments against Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers was postponed yesterday until Monday, awaiting a round-up of the key witnesses who have accused him of lying to the Senate about his secret wartime financial operations.

United States Attorney George M. Fay refused to name the witnesses he will call next week, but it was believed they might include such nationally known figures as Gen. Herry H. Arnold, retired Air Forces chief, and West Coast millionaire Howard Hughes.

Meyers' chief accusers, however, will be the same pair who told a Senate War Investigating subcommittee earlier this month that he was sub-rosa owner of a wartime contracting firm and collected $131,000 from it. They are Bleriot H. Lamarre and his brother-in-law, T. H. Readnower.

Both men branded Meyers a liar for denying their story and accused him of trying to persuade them to give false testimony to the subcommittee.

On that basis, plus the "lie" charges flung at Meyers by Hughes, Arnold and others, the grand jury is being asked to indict him for perjury and subornation of perjury, a two-count allegation which carries a combined maximum penalty of 10 years imprisonment and fines of $4000.

The Justice Department also is preparing to prosecute the 52-year-old retired Air Force officer for alleged income tax evasion for failing to report his wartime "kickbacks." That prosecution presumably would be handled in Baltimore, Md., since Meyers filed his wartime income tax returns from that city.

Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder said his tax sleuths have been digging into Meyers' financial records for several months, starting long before his wartime activities came under public investigation.

Treasury sources said the department's agents moved in on the case after a tip from Senate investigators who were working quietly on the Meyers affair at that time.

Snyder said the Treasury also is giving the Senate Banking Committee all the information in its files on wartime speculation in Government bonds.

Royal Honeymooners Leave 'Goldfish Bowl' for Scotland

AT COMMAND PERFORMANCE—Princess Margaret Rose, sister of newlywed Princess Elizabeth of England, and King Mihai view color films of Elizabeth's wedding to Prince Philip. They were among the royalty who attended the command performance in London's Odeon Theater of a new American motion picture. (Photo radioed from London)

London, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip today gave up their attempt to find honeymoon bliss in the goldfish bowl of southern England and set out for the wild solitude of the Scottish highlands.

Hounded from their honeymoon house at Broadlands, Romsey, by curiosity seekers, they drove by car to London this morning and lunched with King George VI, Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose at Buckingham Palace.

The honeymooners, tired of being peered at by thousands of their subjects since the wedding last Thursday, are expected to board a train tonight for Scotland. They will stay at Birkhall, near Balmoral Castle, on the River Dee in the Scottish highlands. They have informed the lord lieutenant of Aberdeenshire, covering the area of the castle, that they wish to be 'absolutely alone" for the rest of their months honeymoon

Fliers Aim At Los Angeles

Salt Lake City, Nov. 26 (U.P.).—Fliers George Truman of Los Angeles and Clifford Evans of Arlington, Va., passed over the Salt Lake Airport in their world-girdling, tiny planes at 4:10 p. m., MST, today, wiggled their wings and kept on going South on what they hope will be a nonstop flight to Los Angeles from Canada.

They took off from Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada, just north of the international boundary, at 8:53 a. m., from Lethbridge to Los Angeles is 1700 miles. If Evans and Truman make it, it will be the longest hop of their leisurely jaunt around the world.

What Am I Saying? — By Frank Morgan

Pepco Fund Proposals Taken Under Advisement

PUC Will Study 'Modified Sliding Scale' and Refund Revision Requests

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday took under advisement two proposals which will affect the pocketbooks of Washington electricity consumers.

Under one of these proposals, if the Potomac Electric Power Co. earned an excess of profits in one year, half of it would be applied as a reduction to the consumers' December bills. If the company experienced a deficit, it would be made up out of a special reserve as a reduction in the consumers' out of excess profits of previous years.

This proposal, presented to PUC by V. A. McElfresh, its executive accountant and auditor, as a "modified sliding scale plan" of electric rates, would mean that half of the excess of profits would be a measure for the reduction of rates in the following rate year.

At present, when the company earns an income in excess of its basic return, it has retained control over the entire amount of such excess earnings, McElfresh explained.

Objection to Rebate Fund

PUC also is considering a request by Pepco to stop making it set aside about a million dollars a year for refunds to electricity buyers. Pepco wants to treat this money as revenue. If it is permitted to do so, company officials believe they would not need to ask for a rate increase early next year to meet rising costs of operations.

James F. Reilly, Pepco counsel, contended in arguments before the commission yesterday that changing conditions which affect operation of the electricity company are such that reservation of revenues for a reserve fund is "not now in the public interest." He declared that a previous PUC order clearly gives to Pepco the "opportunity of petitioning for relief thereunder in a period of declining earnings, such as that through which the company has been, is, and will be passing."

McElfresh, first witness before the commission yesterday, told the PUC that he believed only alternatives the commission faces in the current petition is either adoption of his plan, or a modification of his plan, or granting to Pepco the type of relief they have requested.

Plan Called Equitable

Byron E. Harding, representing the Federal Government at the hearing, said that "in general, we believe the plan proposed by Mr. McElfresh to be equitable." Harding recommended that moneys set aside by the company, and moneys due customers as refunds, be placed in the reserve suggested under McElfresh's plan. If such disposition is not made of the funds, he recommended that the amounts set aside for consumer refunds should be refunded to consumers, rather than released to Pepco, as requested.

John O'Dea, people's counsel, also favored the plan. "It appears," he declared, "that the plan proposed by Mr. McElfresh gives more benefits to consumers than the present sliding scale." He said he did not feel that the commission should permit Pepco to draw on the reserve fund for any purpose other than that specified.

"Desirable Step Forward"

Reilly, Pepco counsel, in his closing argument, said that his company "has not stated any opposition to McElfresh's proposed plan." He continued, "we do not know at this time what action the commission will finally take with respect to the plan. The proposal appears to be constructive and a very desirable step forward." He added, however, that there were certain provisions of the plan which the company might like to see clarified or amplified.

McElfresh, in presenting his plan to the commission earlier this week, had stated that he believed it would automatically regulate the income of the company, within reasonable limits, at the level of a fair return on the rate base.

Yesterday, he supported this stand by a statement that he believed under existing rate structures, some types of electricity customers are not bearing their share of costs. These types of customers, he said, include both contract and schedule customers. The new procedure he outlined, he said, would make it possible to determine a fair treatment for all customers.

Murphy Trial Board Fails To Take Oath

All was ready yesterday afternoon in the District Building for the swearing in of the special trial board named last week to hear charges against Fire Chief Clement Murphy.

The three-man board, consisting of Austin F. Canfield, chairman; William P. McCracken, jr., and Joseph A. Wilner, proceeded into the office of G. M. Thornett, secretary of the District Board of Commissioners. Thornett was scheduled to do the honors at the ceremony.

Outside, photographers and reporters waited, anxious to be admitted to cover the ceremony.

After a 10-minute delay, an office aide informed them that Thornett was seeking another room more suitable for a program of such import.

The press then moved toward the newly decorated and lengthened board room on the same floor. Finding it empty, they returned to Thornett's office only to learn that the ceremony was postponed indefinitely—and not because of a lack of suitable quarters.

Canfield Points Out Error

It seems that after the board was assembled, Canfield, a former president of the District Bar Association who keeps a wary eye on the law, pointed out that trial boards are sworn in by the chief clerk of the Police Department, and not Thornett, as planned.

Thornett dutifully checked with Chester H. Gray, assistant corporation counsel, who agreed that indeed was the case. A hectic call to the Police Department established that Inspector Clement Cox, the key man in the drama, was home ill and therefore unavailable.

When questioned about the mixup, Gray pointed to Title 4, Chapter 6, Sec. 4-604 in the District Code which reads, "Each member of trial boards shall take an oath to be administered by the chief clerk of the Police Department for faithful and impartial performance of duties of the office."

This section applied to the usual Police and Fire Department trial boards, Gray said, and since the code did not envision or provide for any special board such as the one convened to try the Fire Chief, it should apply to the Murphy board, he said.

Decisions Could Be Attacked

Gray was then asked if the Code did not provide for the calling of such a special board, would its decisions not be subject to attack. He replied that they could be, but that the only person likely to do so was Chief Murphy and he had requested the naming of a special board of three civilians originally.

When the same query was laid before Canfield, he said that he had realized the Commissioners did not have specific authority in the Code for naming the special board.

He said the Commissioners informed him, however, that they did have authority to name the board as "an inherent power since it concerned the public."

Meanwhile, Special Assistant Corporation Counsel Daniel B. Maher indicated there was no need to hurry the swearing-in ceremony. Yesterday he reported he was "still wrestling with the Murphy case report" before preparing the specific charges against the fire chief. The Commissioners announced previously that the trial would get under way when Maher completed the charges.

Johns Authorized Morgan Criticism

Brooke Johns, Montgomery County commission chairman, said "for the record" yesterday he authorized the controversial county government press release criticizing Civil Service Commissioner Jo V. Morgan.

Johns and the other four county commissioners were summoned to testify at a pretrial hearing requested by Morgan's attorney, James R. Miller.

The press release accused Morgan of "dilatory service." It was issued in explanation of the commissioners action in slashing Morgan's $4800 salary to $1200.

2 Problems Are Attacked At Gallinger

N. Y. Psychiatrist, Howard University Inspection Group Visit Hospital

Steps to solve two troublesome problems at Gallinger Hospital were taken yesterday:

1. Dr. Samuel B. Wortis, chief of the psychiatric division of New York City's Bellevue Hospital, completed a two-day inspection of psychiatric services offered at the hospital.

2. Four representatives of Howard University toured the hospital's segregated facilities and are expected to report soon on extent to which Howard can share responsibility for the hospital's services with other local medical schools.

The tour by Howard University representatives was a follow-up of proposals to open Gallinger to training of Negro medical students. The admission of Negro doctors to practice at the institution has the support of the Federal Security Agency and indorsement by the President's Committee on Civil Rights.

Dr. Wortis, a recognized authority, is a professor of psychiatry at New York University. His inspection of Gallinger psychiatric facilities was announced on the heels of a disclosure that psychiatric patients were shackled to their beds at Gallinger due to lack of trained personnel.

Before he left for New York yesterday afternoon, the psychiatrist indicated to local officials that his report on studies here, which had been requested by District Health Officer Dr. George C. Ruhland and Gallinger Superintendent Dr. Alvin R. Sweeney, probably will be completed within a week or 10 days.

Dr. Wortis covered all phases of psychiatric treatment at Gallinger. He was aided by Public Health Service personnel in examination of psychical facilities at the hospital.

Parkside Pupils Compose Poem Giving Thanks for 'Freedom Pilgrims Brought'

The Washington Post

SILVER SPRING "PILGRIMS"—Children in Parkside School, Silver Spring, Md., costumed for their roles in portraying the First Thanksgiving Day, formally present the food items collected yesterday for Montgomery General Hospital to Mrs. Charles W. Williams (right) of the hospital's women's board. Jo Anna Waller, 11, of 207 Leighton ave., and Ronnie Goldstein, 12, of 9300 Colesville rd., make the presentation

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

"We are thankful for this Day of Thanksgiving
And the freedom of thought,
That the Pilgrims brought."

Children of the Parkside Elementary School in Silver Spring proudly heard their principal, Mrs. Grace Zellef, read these lines yesterday at the Thanksgiving assembly. They were the opening of a four-stanza poem written by the children on the theme "we are thankful."

Each of the school's 397 students was asked to contribute ideas for the poem which the sixth graders worked over into rhyme.

The rest of the verse:

"We are thankful for peace with the world
And for the chance of learning to live
Within the rights a democracy can give.
For being Americans, we are thankful."

The youngsters had been told by their teachers that when one was thankful he also was generous. They responded to this teaching by showering the principal with some 500 articles of canned and packaged goods for the Montgomery County General Hospital at Sandy Spring.

Mrs. Charles W. Williams of the women's board of the hospital, who called for the food, had to back a truck into the school grounds and call on the children to help her load it.

In presenting their gifts the children could identify themselves with a dramatization at the assembly of the First Thanksgiving.

On the stage, boys wrapped in blankets with feathers in their hair presented gifts of wild turkey, oysters and venison to other boys garbed in severe black coats, wide-brimmed hats and buckled shoes. Girls in long dresses and bonnets cooked the meal and all shared in the feast of thanksgiving for an abundant harvest.

Children at the Parkside School, too, gave thanks for an abundance of good things.

In the fourth verse of their poem they said:

"We are thankful for knowledge and education,
For our school and the teachers,
The beautiful churches with their preachers,
And for our health and doctors to heal us.
For this beautiful world where we live
And all the blessings God can give,
We thank thee, Lord, who hath made them all."

Second Inquest Orders Man Held in Slaying

Coroner Reverses Finding as Suspect's Brother Alters Story

Joseph Davis Butler, 23, of 208 10th st. se., was ordered held for the action of the grand jury yesterday at a second coroner's inquest in the death of Tommie Lee Coleman, 34, of 718 7th st. se.

Coleman was fatally wounded in the chest by a bullet from a .38-caliber revolver early on the morning of November 10. That same day, a coroner's jury exonerated Charlotte Stokes, 37, of the 7th st. address, on the grounds that Coleman's death was justifiable homicide.

Police said Grady Butler had testified at the first inquest that Charlotte Stokes had fired the gun, but had changed his testimony yesterday at the second inquest. They said Joseph Butler admitted firing the gun after the first inquest.

At two other inquests yesterday in recent fatal stabbings, one person was freed on grounds of justifiable homicide, while another was ordered held for the action of the grand jury.

Exonerated was Mrs. Julia Fletcher, 26, of 449 Massachusetts ave. nw. Her husband, Dan Fletcher, 43, was stabbed in the chest with a fork during an argument in their home shortly before 7 a. m. yesterday. He died several hours later at Casualty Hospital.

The exhibit is the original joint resolution of Congress, September 25, 1789, proposing 12 amendments, of which 10 were ratified and became a part of the Constitution in 1791.

Emancipation Proclamation: Abraham Lincoln's original draft, written in 1862, of the proclamation setting down the plan for the abolition of slavery. It was issued January 1, 1863.

Truman to Join In Thanksgiving Services Today

BLS Estimate

Thanksgiving Dinner for 4 Costs $5.12

The Bureau of Labor Statistics yesterday figured it is costing a family of four $5.12 to eat their traditional Thanksgiving dinner today, or $1.28 per person.

This cost is about 5 per cent more for the same meal in 1946, when it would have cost $4.88. And back in 1941 the same dinner would have cost only $2.60 for four people.

The BLS figure was a computation of average prices for turkey and other fixins traditional to the meal, based on actual amounts consumed at one meal by an average four-person family.

Compared to The Post's Estimate

The Washington Post ,which last week computed costs for Thanksgiving dinner, arrived at a net cost of $1.30 a person for a meal for four. The actual outlay for Thanksgiving dinner for four was $7.91. However, large amounts of some items would be left over to provide additional servings on subsequent days.

Menu Used by BLS

The menu on which the BLS figure is based calls for the following:

Five pounds of turkey at 63 cents a pound, 1 pound of white potatoes, which sell for 66 cents for 15 pounds; 1 pound of sweet potatoes, at 8 cents; one-third of a pound of cranberry sauce, which costs 23 cents for a 16-ounce can; 1 pound of white bread, at 13 cents; ½ a pound of butter, at 88 cents a pound; two eggs, at 80 cents a dozen; 1 pound of celery, at 18 cents; a head of lettuce, at 17 cents; one bunch of carrots, at 15 cents; one quart of milk, at 20 cents; ⅛ of a pound of coffee, at 48 cents a pound; one No. 1 2½ can of pumpkin, at 19 cents, and 1 pound of apples, at 12 cents.

Sun to Shine Long Enough To Give Thanks

There'll be a little ray of sunshine for your Thanksgiving.

That was the word from the Weather Bureau last night in a forecast that included "considerable cloudiness" and afternoon temperatures near 40 degrees.

Friday is expected to be more of the same. High temperature yesterday was 43 degrees, but the mercury had dipped to 34 degrees at 9:30 p. m. yesterday.

West Virginia's Highland County, on the Virginia State line reported 1 inch of snow, but if any fell in Virginia it was a mistake, the Richmond weatherman said. "If any fell in Virginia it crept in from West Virginia and it was a mistake," he commented.

Temperatures were below zero in parts of the Midwest and dipped to new seasonal lows in other sections. Grand Forks, Nebr., had 7 below; Pembina, N. Dak., 6 degrees under.

Joint Luncheon Held by Kiwanis And Rotary Clubs

More than 400 Kiwanians and Rotarians attended a joint Thanksgiving luncheon yesterday at Hotel Mayflower.

Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, minister of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, discussed the religious ideals out of which historic American documents developed.

"This country grew out of a revolt against ecclesiastical and political absolutism," Dr. Gerstenfeld declared. "It affirms the belief in the natural rights of man and denies both nativism and secularism."

While "we have separation of church and state" in this country, Dr. Gerstenfeld said, "we do not have the separation of religion and state."

Without "religious ideas," the spiritual leader said, "we have no foundation for our constitutional democracy."

Fairfax Board Denies Addition to Cemetery

Plans to add 100 acres to Mount Comfort Cemetery near Penn Daw in Fairfax County have been finally denied by the Fairfax County Zoning Board of Appeals.

The question, which has been pending for nearly three months, was denied at the board's Tuesday meeting on ground it would remove too large a tract from the county tax list. Cemetery lots are tax free.

The zoning appeal board approved construction of a roller skating rink on Route No. 211 near Merrifield with less than the required setback.

Phone Annex Can't Exceed Height Limit

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. yesterday was denied permission by the District Board of Zoning Adjustment to exceed the 110-foot-height limit in building a $1,200,000 annex.

Plans call for the new structure to adjoin the present telephone company building in the 700 block of 13th st. nw. It is to be built on the site of the old Andrews Paper Co. building.

The telephone company had hoped to build an addition as tall as the present building. However, the present building, which consists of nine stories and a penthouse, exceeds the 110-foot limit. It was built before that limit was put into the zoning law.

Must Change Design

Leon Chatelain, jr., the architect, said the zoning board decision will make necessary a change in the design of the building but will not prevent its construction in conformity with the 110-foot limit. The new building will be used to house toll equipment for long-distance telephone service.

In another case yesterday, the zoning board approved the establishment of a philanthropic institution in the home of the late John R. Edie at 1628 16th st. nw.

The request had asked as an alternative the establishment of a nonprofit institution of higher learning or culture devoted to the arts and sciences in the Edie mansion.

The appeal was made by the St. John's Episcopal Church on behalf of Baptist groups. St. John's Church, which was willed the home by Edie, sold it to the Baptists last month for $100,000.

School Is Permitted

The board also gave E. Bertha Chinn and Herbert W. Walker permission to open a private school of language at 1329 18th st. nw.

It gave permission for one year to Joeph Tucci to continue operation of a temporary parking lot at 918 16th st. nw.

It ruled against Edgar E. and Helen B. Quayle, who wanted to open an auto repair shop in the rear of 1754 Columbia rd. nw.

Joseph D. Gatti was denied permission to open a gasoline station at the northeast corner of Hiatt pl. and Irving st. nw.

The board approved for one year the appeal of Mary Morgan for a variance from the use provisions of the "A" semirestricted area district to permit establishment of a nursery school at 690 47th st. ne.

Festry and Dorothy H. L. Yoakum were denied permission to erect a two-story building at 3808 Morrison st. nw. to be used as a dyeing and cleaning business.

The board asked Sally A. Maxey to resubmit her appeal asking permission to build groups of apartments not meeting certain zoning requirements at Livingston rd. and 3rd st. se.

Two Projects

Alexandria May Buy War Housing

Sale of Chinquapin Village and Cameron Valley wartime housing projects to the City of Alexandria will be considered next Wednesday at a meeting between Alexandria city and Federal officials.

Sale of the projects, built to house military and civilian personnel from Fort Belvoir and the Alexandria Naval Torpedo Plant, has been urged for some time by several Alexandria veterans' organizations.

Duncan Price, of the Housing and Home Finance Agency, said it wants to dispose of such developments as rapidly as possible and that the agency hopes a definite decision on the sale can be reached at the Wednesday meeting.

Persons now living in the projects, Price said, will be protected in event of any sale, the only change in policy being a requirement that veterans be given priority when vacancies occur.

Alexandria Mayor W. T. Wilkins, at last Tuesday's Alexandria City Council meeting, said the council will do "all it can" for the city's veterans and urged the council to turn out in a body for the city-HHFA meeting.

Ingram Asks Murder Verdict For Mother in Baby's Death

Hagerstown, Md, Nov. 26 (A.P.).—While the petite, red-haired defendant sat nervously twisting a handkerchief, State's Attorney Martin L. Ingram today asked a verdict of murder against 24-year-old Dorothy McCarty who is accused of strangling to death her 1-day-old daughter.

Ingram told the jury at the trial opening he "would prove" the woman strangled her baby shortly after birth, put the body in a shoe box and tossed it into the abandoned Chesapeake & Ohio canal near Hancock. The dead infant was found last July 31.

Pointing to the defendant's bright hair, Ingram declared "the baby in the box had red hair."

Dr. Samuel Wells, deputy county medical examiner, testified the baby met death "by strangulation and suffocation."

Attorney Ingram told the jury "if we show sufficient motive and evidence there should be a verdict of murder."

The defendant is the mother of a 5-year-old son.

Plans Announced To Tap Rich New Ky. Coal Field

Tazewell, Va., Nov. 26 (A.P.).—Three coal corporations and the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Co. today announced plans to tap the rich, new southeastern Kentucky Leatherwood coal field which is expected to produce five million tons of coal a year by 1950.

At the same time, plans were revealed for the construction of a modern mining plant with a daily capacity of 8000 tons.

Involved in the transaction with the railroad are the Kentucky River Coal Corp., the Jewell Ridge Coal Corp. and the Fourseam Coal Corp.

Officials of the companies said they planned to ask the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to construct 5½ miles of spur into the heart of the coal field.

Spokesmen described the Leatherwood field as virgin territory lying between the long-established Hazard and Harlan fields. They predicted the new vein would yield some 300 million tons. It is spread over the counties of Perry, Letcher, Leslie and Harlan and is bounded on the south by Pine Mountain and on the north by Maces Creek.

Norfolk 'Water War' With Navy Continues

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 26 (A.P.).—The "water war" between the U. S. Navy and the Norfolk city government continues, with both parties adamant. Neither the Navy nor city officials, however, will comment on it and inquiries in both directions have brought "no comment" answers.

The Navy has not paid a Norfolk city water bill since July and the contract, expiring June 30, has not been renewed. Fifth Naval District officials apparently remain convinced that the rate of 12.5 cents per thousand gallons is unjustified. City officials remain convinced that the rate should remain 12.5 cents, if not more.

The final survey that was to end the embarrassing situation has long been completed and results are before Navy officers and Norfolk city officials. The survey—called a water survey to end water surveys—was made by Metcalf & Eddy of Boston.

SCHOOL DEPT.—At long last, high school football is getting important in Washington. The Tech-Central game for the championship at Griffith Stadium tomorrow night will draw more than 20,000 fans, a new high for schoolboy football here.

POVICH

The frenzy for tickets is understandable. Neither Tech nor Central has lost a game in the school series this year. Tech hasn't been scored on. The game is being played in the big league setting of the stadium, replete with marching bands, drum majorettes, vast cheering sections and all the trappings of a football festival.

It's the one game in which the Board of Education is taking a direct hand to make a proud display of its high school football, in cooperation with The Washington Post, which is happy to be a cosponsor. To the athletic funds of all the high schools and the Community Chest will go the gate receipts.

You ought to go. A good part of your ticket money will go to underprivileged children. Perhaps you heard Art Brown in one of his public service broadcasts when he said: "I am broadcasting from the children's ward of the hospital, near the bedside of a little girl who has been asleep—for two years."

PHILADELPHIA DEPT.—No city ever experienced the football spree that falls to the lot of Philadelphia this weekend. Today, at Franklin Field, the traditional Cornell-Penn Thanksgiving Day game will put 78,000 fans into the Penn stadium. Two days later, at Municipal Stadium, Army vs. Navy will attract a full house of 102,000. The next day, at Shibe Park, the Eagles and Steelers will play before 40,000.

That's 220,000 football customers, partaking of the biggest football binge one town ever knew, I'm safe in saying. And not the least important will be the pro game, that will draw the least customers.

Greasy Neale's Eagles and Jock Sutherland's Steelers will be playing for what amounts to the Eastern Division championship of the National Football League. Sutherland's team, never before that close to an Eastern title, will be the sentimental favorite, but the Eagles, with the redoubtable Steve Van Buren will doubtless be the betting choice. Wrapped up in the contest is a real feud between the coaches, Sutherland and Neale, who never pretended to be friendly.

BASEBALL DEPT.—Baseball Commissioner Chandler is holding up the Nats-Browns deal, and Clark Griffith's check in favor of the Browns, until he can ascertain Johnny Berardino's latest state of mind. Clark Griffith wants the deal that sent Gerry Priddy and cash to the Browns voided if Berardino makes good his threat to retire from baseball.

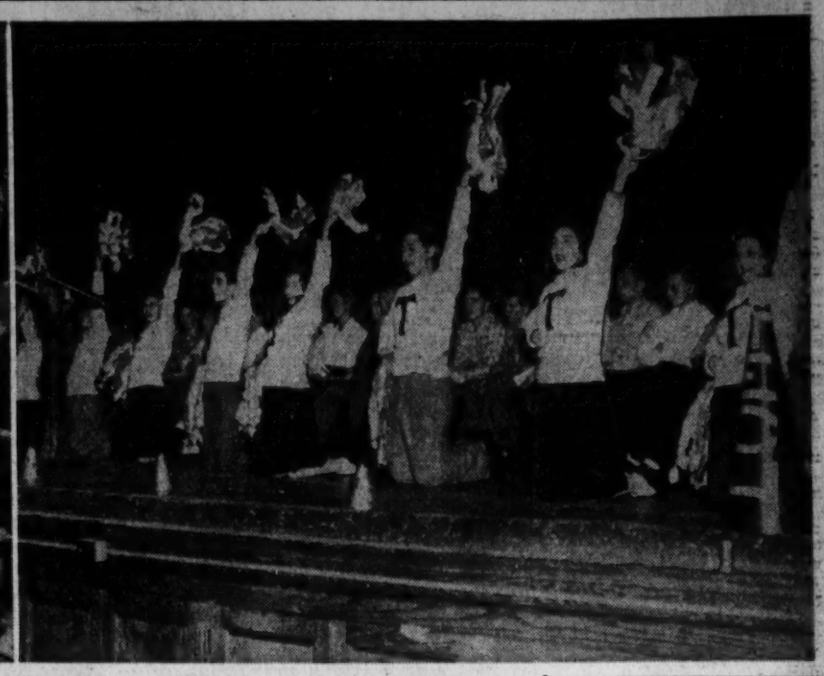
Berardino says he has signed a seven-year movie contract and won't report to the Nats. It was an announcement nicely timed with the coming release of the picture "The Winner's Circle," a horse race story in which Berardino has a part. In fact, Berardino's retirement statement was half retirement, half plug for the picture and it is suspected that he will change his mind about not joining the Nats.

If the deal is, indeed, voided, then Griffith will still be holding the bag. He will have on his hands in Priddy a second baseman he admits he doesn't want and whose trading value has already been diminished by that fact. The Nats already lack an adequate third baseman and shortstop, and Griffith's dislike of Priddy has added a second base problem.

PAYROLL DEPT.—There must have been satisfaction in the Browns' front office when Muddy Ruel signed a contract to join the Cleveland Indians as a coach. It means at least a $10,000 saving for the St. Louis club which was obligated to pay Ruel his full 1948 salary, estimated at $20,000, after firing him as manager last month.

With Ruel on the payroll of the Indians, however, the Browns are permitted to deduct his Cleveland salary from the sum they are forced to pay him. It's a bit of balm, at least, following what threatens to be the loss of Berardino and the "big check" Clark Griffith was ready to hand over if the Berardino deal went through.

There may have been complaints with Ruel as a manager at St. Louis, but the Indians have confidence in him to do a bright job with the Cleveland pitchers. When the White Sox came up with a slew of good pitchers a few seasons ago, Manager Jimmy Dykes waived all credit for himself, pointing to Coach Ruel with the comment: "He bosses the pitching department."



Tech, Central Teams Get Rousing Sendoff

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The undefeated football teams of Central and McKinley Tech were given roaring sendoffs by their students bodies yesterday in final pep assemblies before the Interhigh championship game tomorrow night at Griffith Stadium.

As 1600 Techites shouted their approval, Coach Ed Solomon promised "that our team (unbeaten, unscored on) won't let up on Central."

"I had Central's big star, Jimmy Pantos, in my gym class when I taught at Jefferson Junior High two years ago," Solomon said. "He's a good boy. I know just exactly how good. Tech will be ready for him."

Coach Jan Jankowski addressed the Central students.

"Through the years of the Tech-Central series, Central defeated Tech in 1907, again in 1917 and in 1927," he said. "In 1937, Central beat Tech, too. In 1947 . . ."

He wasn't given a chance to finish, the students drowned him out.

Just before school let out for the Thanksgiving holiday, Hardy Pearce, director of interhigh athletics, announced that one attendance record had already been broken.

For the first time in the history of Washington high school athletics, all student tickets, 7560, were sold out.

Both teams went through light drills yesterday, and Central Coach Jankowski announced that his team would rest until game time. Tech Coach Solomon said that his team would go through another light drill today.

Girls Twirl Batons

Eastern, Calvin Coolidge, McKinley Tech and Central have entered outstanding baton twirlers in the girls' contest which will be a feature of half-time activities of the McKinley-Central interhigh football championship game at Griffith Stadium Friday night.

Entries: Eastern—Anita Ruben, Judy Adler; Central—Elaine Milson, Betty Woodward; Coolidge—Joyce Sugg, Sydney Hepler, Rita Rose, Betty Dunovan; McKinley—Louis Lippey, Louis Michaelson, Mary Elizabeth Ford.

Hardy Pearce, director of athletics in high schools, expects entries today from Roosevelt, Western, Wilson and Anacostia. Representatives of those schools may reach Pearce today at Wisconsin 6789.

Service Bands Play

Two topnotch service bands, the Quantico Marine and Bugle Corps and the Navy School of Music, will keep things lively at the Interhigh football championship game tomorrow night.

Four of Washington's top sports announcers will handle the public address system at Griffith Stadium during the game. They are Arch McDonald (WTOP), Steve Douglass (WRC), Bill Brundige (WOL) and Bill Tobin, expert on highschool games.

GW and W-L Clash Today For Va. Title

George Washington's Presidents of Alexandria and Washington-Lee's Little Generals of Arlington renew their annual Thanksgiving Day rivalry today at 11 a. m., at the G. W. Stadium, with the Northern Virginia Class A High School Conference championship at stake.

Also on the line is the "Old Oaken Bucket," the trophy that has gone to the winner of the G. W. vs. W.-L. game since 1935. Washington-Lee has won the bucket two years in a row. If the underdog Little Generals can turn the trick again, they'll get permanent possession of the prize.

Since they began football relations in 1926, Washington-Lee has won 12, George Washington 8 and three have resulted in ties. Not since 1938, has G. W. beaten Washington-Lee.

The Presidents take the field favored because of their 6-2-1 record against a stiffer string of foes than that opposed by the Little Generals, who have a 7-3 record. Each team has a 2-0 record in loop competition, and to the winner goes the crown.

Pacing the Little Generals will be their All-Metroplitan Fullback Dickie Lewis and Tackle Rollo Thompson. Lewis scored five touchdowns against G. W. two years ago, and three more last year. Dickie leads conference pointmakers with 72. Bob Hanna, G. W.'s big halfback threat, is right behind Lewis with 63.

Colonials Clash With Kings Point

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

If George Washington's footballers can stand the heady experience of being favored for the first time this season, they well may close out their schedule with something they haven't achieved in eight previous starts—a victory.

The Colonials meet Kings Point at 2 p. m. today in Griffith Stadium in a battle of the oft-vanquished.

You have to like the local school on the basis of its fine game against Georgetown last Saturday. The Hoyas, heavy favorites, were a wiser and sadder bunch after being held to a scoreless tie.

Good Against Hoyas

George Washington displayed real football form, outscoring Georgetown in first downs, 10 to 4, and in yards gained on the ground, 214 to 98.

Coach Skip Stahley is pinning his offensive hopes today on backs who performed well against the Hoyas. They include Frankie Cavallo, Bill Spangler and Joe Bernot. Cavallo nearly gave the Colonials their first victory over Georgetown when he broke loose for 50 yards before being brought down from behind.

GW probably will vary its single-wing attack with the T formation employed last week for the first time. And directing it will be Freshman Pete Cordelli, who played varsity ball for the first time against Georgetown.

George Washington is moving progressively toward its first victory. Two weeks ago, the Colonials lost to Wayne, 7-6. After the tie with Georgetown, a triumph over Kings Point is the next logical step.

Kings Point has scored only two victories in 10 starts this season.

Armory Rent Agreed Upon

A program for playing 74 basketball games at Washington's National Guard Armory for rental fees equalling 15 per cent of gross receipts, after taxes have been deducted, received official approval yesterday.

The plan was announced after conferences with Commissioner Guy Mason and Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner. Senate Committee Counsel James R. Kirkland, who took part in the meetings, explained that the plan had earlier been cleared with Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commanding general of the District National Guard.

It was the first step toward fuller use of the Armory under the new agreement calling for joint management by the District and the National Guard until Congress writes a new law next year saying which agency shall have final control over nonmilitary Armory uses.

The first $4000 of the money received for use of the Armory will go to pay the season rental for 3600 bleacher seats to be erected around the playing court.

All additional income from the sports use of the Armory—and for other nonmilitary activities there—is to be deposited in a special account with the United States Treasury.

Among those who took part in yesterday's conferences were Commissioners Mason and General Young, Kirkland, Corporation Young, Kirkland, Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester H. Gray; Robert H. Davis, District director of inspections; C. Max Farrington, director of men's activities at George Washington University; Rome Schwagel, graduate manager of athletics at Georgetown University; Hardy L. Pearce, representing the District high schools, and others.

Grid Lions Play Bears Tonight

Augmented by Aaron Perry, local boxer, and Cannonball Cooper, former Union University star fullback, the Washington Lions play their postponed game with the New York Bears at Griffith Stadium tonight, at 8 o'clock.

This marks the first time the Lions have played at home this season. The locals, claimants of the national Negro pro championship, have an imposing record of six wins and one loss. The Richmond Rams, Cooper's former aggregation, handed the Lions the lone setback.

The game, sponsored by the United and Allied Veterans of America, was postponed from Armistice Day. Tickets sold for the earlier date will be honored tonight.

Letter From Doctor Corning About Interhigh Title Game—

Dr. Hobart M. Corning, superintendent of schools, yesterday wrote the following letter to the Sports Editor of The Washington Post:

"I have discussed with the members of the Board of Education the plans of the principals of the high schools in divisions 1-9 for the football game to be played Friday evening, November 28, between the teams from the Central and McKinley High schools to determine the championship for the present season.

"I feel that the board members agree with me that such an event has definite values in the way of public relationships and that they approve the plan to devote the proceeds of the game first to the purchase of additional necessary equipment for the protection of our schoolboy players, and next to the treasury of the Community Chest Federation.

"We are keenly appreciative of the fine services being rendered by The Washington Post in lending its name as a sponsor of this game and more particularly to the active assistance it is giving us in arranging publicity, in planning the program for the evening, and in extending many courtesies. The school people are finding it very pleasant to work with your representatives.

Yours, very sincerely,
HOBART M. CORNING,
Superintendent of Schools

Amazing Trygve Tuve Wins Contest Again

Defying any heretofore recognized law of averages, 14-year-old Trygve Tuve again was a winner in last week's finale of The Washington Post football contest.

The Chevy Chase youngster missed only the George Washington-Georgetown tie and correctly predicted the score of the Kansas-Missouri game (20-14, Kansas). This amazing feat enabled him to win out over 31,674 entries.

Tuve, Leland Junior High student, won The Washington Post's fifth contest when he picked all 20 winners to lead 36,474 other entries.

When informed that he again was a winner (and assured that no one was playing a trick on him), the lad thought he would invite his parents to accompany him on The Washington Post's all-expense trip for two to Saturday's Army-Navy game.

Then, after a burst of sudden inspiration, he decided to invite two wounded war veterans to be his guests. Trygve's idea is to have one patient from Walter Reed Hospital (Army) and one from Naval Hospital at Bethesda share his good fortune.

Trygve is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Merle Tuve, 135 Hesketh st., Chevy Chase. And he isn't the only prize-winner in the family.

His father, outstanding research physicist, recently was awarded $2500 in cash and a bronze plaque from the Research Corporation of America. He was honored for his part in starting radio pulse exploration of the upper atmosphere—these discoveries laid the groundwork for later development of radar. Dr. Tuve also was cited for his leadership in work on the proximity fuse.

Dr. Tuve is director of terrestrial magnetism at Carnegie Institution.

Trygve's mother is a well-known psychoanalyst who practices under her maiden name, Dr. Winifred Whitman.

There's reason to suspect that youthful Trygve must employ some combination of radar and psychoanalysis to turn in his uncanny selections.

Although he missed predicting the tie, he did select underdog George Washington and the Colonials held a wide statistical edge in their game against Georgetown.

Runnerup last week was Sybil J. German, 411 La Verne ave., Alexandria. The second place entry also listed 19 winners but missed out by picking Missouri to beat Kansas. Twenty-three others had only two wrong.

The Washington Post's highly popular football contest attracted 225,175 entries in seven weeks. Weekly prizes included four tickets to the outstanding local football game plus the all-expense trip for two to the Army-Navy classic.

Young Tuve already had planned to take his best friend, Johnny Skilling, 14, 136 Hesketh st., to the game. And now, since he won again, some lucky soldier and sailor will be able to enjoy The Washington Post trip.

Here is the complete list of contest winners:

1st—Tie between Ralph I. Miller, Rockville, Md., and Charles M. Gott, 485 E st. sw.

2d—William Kaiser, 3607 Georgia ave. nw.

3d—Capt. Charles F. McNulty, Walter Reed Hospital.

4th—James Gietner, 1922 N st. nw.

5th—Trygve Tuve, 135 Hesketh st., Chevy Chase.

7th—Trygve Tuve.

Pilaster Scores Third Straight Victory in Bowie Feature

At Bowie

$10,000 'Cap Tops Holiday Race Card

Bowie, Md., Nov. 26.—Those who prefer turf action as an appetizer for their Thanksgiving dinner will be offered a good program at nearby Bowie. The usual eight-race display of horseflesh is topped by the $10,000 added Endurance Handicap, the year's final juvenile test in the East.

The 2-year-olds, 10 of them, are scheduled to battle it out at a mile and 70 yards and upwards of 20,000 are expected to delay their turkey action to see the annual running.

Three of the youngsters probably will draw the bulk of the mutuel play but putting a finger on the favorite is difficult. Maryland's chief rootin' interest will settle on Alan T. Clarke's Fritz Maisel, winner of the Bowie Breeders' Stake. However, the betting may center on High Ground Stable's consistent Hefty and Vashti, the fast-closing representative of Belair Stud.

These three, as well as Mr. H. P., half of the O. S. Deming entry, have won at this meeting and are primed for the big test. Of the starters, Hefty is asked to carry topweight of 117 pounds to Fritz Maisel's 114 and Vashti's 112.

Others in the lineup are: O. S. Deming's Bill Howk, Joe Tucci's Fresh Breeze, W. Y. Goldsborough's Binky B, Isadore Bieber's Empty Noose, Brookmeade Stable's Turtle Lands and P. A. Rothfuss' Gain A'foot.

South Carolina, Wake Forest Meet

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 26 (AP).—South Carolina's Gamecocks and Wake Forest's Demon Deacons will wind up their 1947 football campaigns in a Southern Conference game in Charlotte Memorial stadium tomorrow.

The Deacons will start a line averaging 205 pounds to South Carolina's 201, and the North Carolina team's backfield will outweigh the bird backs 187 to 183 pounds average.

Favored Ensueno Is Third

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bowie, Md., Nov. 26.—H. L. Straus' Pilaster, who found his form late this season, turned in his third straight victory in today's Charles Purse, top offering on the Thanksgiving Eve program.

The son of Pilate and Air Cooled finished two lengths in front of Brandywine Stable's Dirl. A neck farther back came N. Seabra's Ensueno, once a South American pride and the favorite in the field of six.

Pilaster, coupled with H. B. Cohen's Denagee as the Trainer F. A. Bonsal entry, returned a $4.80 mutuel and was clocked in 1:47 4/5 for the mile and a sixteenth over a track that became fast during the afternoon. A crowd of 7000 saw the action.

Denagee Early Leader

Trainer Bonsal gave Ensueno the one-two punch. Denagee went to the front early and when challenged by the imported horse he made his rival step out. Then Pilaster, not hurried early, responded to a drive and disposed of Ensueno. Dirl, far back on the backstretch, closed like the wind to be a flying second.

The victory, worth $2100 to Pilaster, brought his year's earnings to an even $10,000.

Jockey Nick Combest, who won the third race with Belair Stud's My Emma at a $32.60 mutuel, was injured in the fifth race, the Marlboro Purse. He was aboard H. B. Hershon's Storm Hawk, the favorite. At the far turn the gelding began to move and ran up on the heels of C'est Tout and fell.

Double Pays $45

Combest, said to have suffered head injuries, had not regained consciousness when he left here in an ambulance for the South Baltimore General Hospital in Baltimore.

This event was won by Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Called at $16.60. It was the second straight winner for the owner, who sent Lanlast out to take the fourth event at a $9 mutuel.

The daily double on the 12-and-2 combination paid $45. Good Rob won the first race and Coral Way took the second.

Bill Bennings

DEAR FOLKS. At Bowie.

Friend Alan Clarke finds out on the turkey day program if his Fritz Maisel is a good colt or a great one. The chunky son of Big Beans goes for another hunk of big dough in the Endurance. In the Bowie Breeders' Stake he downed Maryland foals. This time the competition is open and should Fritz turn back such as Hefty and Vashti I'll be expecting to see him in the Clarke colors at the Kentucky Derby. At least the colt will deserve a fling at the big money. I'm going to be rooting, but if I bet, my two megs will have to go on Vashti. Double Jay and Gallorette, expected to provide the big punch of the $20,000 added Bryan and O'Hara on Saturday's closing day card, were on the track for workouts. Double Jay showed Trainer Charlie Feltner a mile in 1.45 3/5 over a track that was dull, while Trainer Ed Christmas watched the Brann mare go a half in .51 2/5. Jockey Arnold Kirkland will ride Gallorette if she goes and Johnny Breen will pilot Double Jay. Parts of the programs Friday and Saturday will be televised. WNBW, the NBC outlet in Washington, will send out the fifth, sixth and seventh races with Ray Michael announcing. Charles Town warns horsemen who have n't been assigned stalls not to ship there for the three-week session opening Monday. See you on the rail—BILL.

1—Larkaround, Gambling Andy, Five-O-Four.

2—Cash O Boy, Poolesville, War Scholar.

4—Equisun, Mr. H. P., Count Display.

6—Vashti, Fritz Maisel, Hefty.

8—Maryknoll, New Start, Gene Chance.

Best bet—VASHTI.

Middie Rooters Too Enthusiastic— Six Are Jailed

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 26 (AP).—Enthusiasm for the "beat Army" campaign at the Naval Academy landed six second class midshipmen in the Annapolis lock-up early today—for 15 minutes.

The Middies were apprehended painting their slogan about town—even on the door of the police garage. After they were arrested with their painting equipment in hand, they were turned over to the shore patrol.

The big burst of inspiration, however, will come tonight at the annual pre-Army game pep rally. Dick Scott, Navy's football captain, will touch off the program when he lights the huge bonfire.

Honors Heaped on Gambino

Two-hundred pound Lu (Bambino) Gambino had a king-sized day yesterday.

Within the space of 24 hours, Maryland's touchdown maker:

1. Made an All-America team.
2. Was accorded honorable mention on another.
3. Was runnerup for the Southern Conference's most valuable award.
4. Bruised his shoulder in practice as the Terps prepared for the season's finale with N. C. State at College Park Saturday.

The New York Daily News named the Old Liner halfback on its Catholic All-America first team. The United Press accorded him honorable mention and the Durham, N. C., Touchdown Club announced he was nosed out by North Carolina's Charlie Justice for its award as the Southern Conference's most valuable player.

All 16 head coaches in the conference participated in the poll. Justice got three votes, Gambino two.

At practice yesterday, Gambino complained of a bruised shoulder. That was a healthy sign for the Terps. Before last Saturday's Vanderbilt Gambino said his side bothered him. If it did it wasn't noticeable as he scored two touchdowns and passed for the third as the Terps upset Vandy, 20-6.

This Time It's Army, SMU, Georgia Tech, Carolina, Texas

By Austin Bealmear

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—Digging out of last week's wreckage, we take a final fling at football forecasting for 1947 with slim prospects of boosting an average that slumped to .792 on 564 correct predictions and 148 misses after the unfortunate happenings of the past Saturday:

Army vs. Navy—Navy, which matched Army in everything except extra points last year, always fires its biggest guns against its traditional rival and could make things hot for the Cadets this time. But one considered vote for Army.

Texas Christian vs. Southern Methodist—Win, lose or draw, the Mustangs go into the Cotton Bowl as Southwest Conference hosts, but they need this one to clinch a clear-cut claim to the title and complete an all-victorious season. Southern Methodist.

Georgia vs. Georgia Tech—A renewal of one of several traditional intrastate rivalries scheduled Saturday. Georgia Tech.

Cornell vs. Pennsylvania—Nothing much at stake here since the Quaker already have wrapped up the Ivy League title, although they will be protecting a record of six wins and a tie against a Big Red club that always gets itself fired up for this game, Pennsylvania.

Virginia vs. North Carolina—After six straight wins, the Tar Heels have developed into the power they were figured to be before dropping two early season games. This should make it seven. North Carolina.

Texas vs. Texas A. and M.—Another traditional Turkey Day clash, with the Longhorns shooting for a Sugar Bowl bid. Texas.

Mississippi vs. Mississippi State—Ole Miss needs this one to take the Southeastern Conference title. Charley Conerly and Barney Poole are just the boys who can get it.

Rice vs. Baylor—Figured to be the class of the Southwest Conference this year, the Owls are doomed to finish no higher than third place but should hammer the Bears deeper into the cellar.

Oklahoma vs. Oklahoma A. & M.—Another intrastate rivalry of long standing. The Big Six co-champions should win handily. Oklahoma.

Alabama vs. Miami (Fla.)—No hill for the Bowl-bound Crimson Tide.

Arkansas vs. Tulsa—A couple of neighbors from different conferences get together here. Arkansas.

Oregon State vs. Nebraska—An intersectional struggle. We'll take Nebraska.

THURSDAY

William and Mary over Richmond, Wake Forest over South Carolina, Denver over Colorado, Montana over Colorado A. & M., Rutgers over Brown, Davidson over Furman, St. Louis over Duquesne, Utah State over Utah, Virginia Tech over VMI, George Washington over Kings Point.

Caps Defeat St. Louis by 83-64 Score

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Washington Capitols broke a two-game losing streak at Uline Arena last night, drubbing the St. Louis Bombers, 83-64, in a Basketball Association of America game.

The game was even-stephen until midway in the second period when the Caps, with a bewildering passing attack and a fast break, almost swept the Bombers off the court.

Washington led by as much as 25 points at one juncture in the third period.

The score was tied seven times and the lead changed hands eight times in the first half.

The Capitols finally broke out in front to stay late in the second period, scoring nine points while blanking the Bombers to hold a 38-31 halftime advantage.

Big Irv Rothenberg, subbing for Center John Mahnken, and Guard Dick O'Keefe, playing in the place of Bob Feerick, teamed to move the Caps from a one-point lead at 28 to 27 to 37 to 27 before the St. Louis delegation could tally.

It was the combination of Rothenberg, under the boards, and O'Keefe feeding him that brought despair to the Bombers.

Rothenberg got seven of his 11 points during that two-minute spree. One of his goals was a beauty, set up by the ball-hawking O'Keefe. O'Keefe, trying to retrieve an errant pass, passed the ball backhanded to Rothenberg who was breaking for the basket. Rothenberg caught it and merely had to stretch up and drop in a layup.

Buddy O'Grady, the former Georgetown star whom the Caps sold to the Bombers only two weeks ago, kept his team in the running with four baskets, all from long range, during the brief time he played in the second period.

The Capitols led, 16 to 15, at the end of the first 12-minute period.

The Caps really turned on the heat in the third period, cracking down for 26 points while the Bombers got only 10.

Johnny Norlander, playing one of his finer games, was unstoppable under the basket, tossing in eight points as the Caps turned the game into a riot.

Unbeaten Penn Tackles Last Obstacle Today in Cornell

Philadelphia, Nov. 26 (AP).—Penn's Ivy League football champions tomorrow face traditional foe Cornell—final obstacle on the Red and Blue road to the first unbeaten season in 39 years—with a sellout crowd of more than 78,000 assured for Franklin Field.

The Quakers, tied only by Army, ruled a three-touchdown favorite for this fifty-fourth renewal of a series interrupted only once since it began in 1893.

Penn has run up 198 points this year to the opposition's 35 in thumping Lafayette, Dartmouth, Columbia, Navy, Princeton and Virginia and deadlocking the Cadets at 7-7.

Cornell, meanwhile, scored 126 points, allowed 140, in beating Lehigh, Colgate, Princeton and Syracuse while losing to Yale, Navy, Columbia and Dartmouth.

The game is the first of three headline gridiron attractions here this weekend. Army and Navy will draw over 100,000 to Municipal Stadium Saturday and a new attendance record of more than 40,000 is expected at Shibe Park Sunday for the Philadelphia Eagles-Pittsburgh Steelers clash that should go a long way towards settling the National Football League Eastern Division title chase.

Penn Coach George Munger listed nine seniors in his starting lineup, including the entire backfield sparked by All-East Skippy Minisi.

Munger awarded one starting guard berth to Walt Farnham, a hard-working sub all season, but made no other shifts and indicated his team is in good condition.

Probable lineups:

Hamilton Refuses To Answer Critics Of Coaching Setup

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 26 (AP).—Navy's director of football, Capt. Tom Hamilton, refused comment today on recent criticism of the Naval Academy graduate coaching system, and declared emphatically "my whole concern at this time is winning the Army game Saturday in Philadelphia."

Hamilton took time out from his busy preparations for the forty-eighth meeting between the service rivals to review a dismal season that has brought Navy only one victory and a tie in eight games to date.

"I have no interest in the future beyond the Army game," he replied when asked to comment on a suggestion that he be named permanent coach at the academy.

Army Starts Surprise Back

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 26 (AP).—Army's football team did a little bit of everything today but all of it at full speed as it romped through its final hard drill for the clash with Navy at Philadelphia Saturday.

Romping at quarterback on the first team was Arnold Galiffa, 185-pounder from Donora, Pa., who came from nowhere at the start of the season to take over the field general job vacated by the graduated Arnold Tucker.

Galiffa, who at 6 foot 2 inches probably is the tallest quarterback in the country, has thrown 45 passes and completed 20 for 275 yards.

In a carefully phrased appraisal of Saturday's 48th meeting between the two service schools, Coach Earl Blaik rated Navy's aerial attack as better than Army's and the Middies' rushing offensive as adequate "especially when you remember that Navy gained more yards on the ground against Penn State than all the other Penn State foes combined."

W. & M. Plays Spiders Today

Richmond, Va., Nov. 26 (AP).—William and Mary's Indians, already selected to play in the Dixie Bowl at Birmingham, Ala., on New Year's Day, make their bid to clinch the Southern Conference championship against the University of Richmond Spiders here tomorrow afternoon.

The game will be the 40th in the lengthy series between the traditional rivals. W. & M. has won 19 of the tilts, Richmond, 16, while four were ties.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 26 (U.P.).—The Syracuse University boxing team today accepted an invitation to meet the University of Miami in a match at Miami, December 30.

Jackie Will Get 'Increase'–Rickey

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers will offer Jackie Robinson a "substantial increase" in salary for the 1948 season and hope to be able to announce their 1948 manager before the close of the major league baseball meetings on December 10, President Branch Rickey said today.

Rickey explained that he had been "working directly" on the managerial situation for the past six days and would continue to do so if he does not find it necessary to go to Miami for the minor league convention.

Asked about a raise for Robinson, Rickey said "there's no question about it. He deserves a substantial increase. I am asking him to come here about some other things and if I get a chance I will talk about his contract."

Steelers Recall Halfback

Pittsburgh, No. 26 (U.P.).—The Pittsburgh Steelers today recalled right halfback Max Kielbosa to bolster the backfield for a crucial game against the Philadelphia Eagles Sunday.

Irish Land 3 Berths on UP All-America

By Leo H. Petersen
United Press Sports Editor

New York, Nov. 26—Offensive brilliance which paid off in victories on the field, keynotes the 1947 United Press All-America football team, announced today and selected by sports writers and sports broadcasters in the annual Nationwide poll.

In keeping with the trend of the times, the 1947 eleven is probably the most powerful offensive array ever selected, yet it emphasized that all of the men on the first team were able to do better than hold their own when the other team had the ball.

It is a cosmopolitan team with players from all sections. The Midwest led the way with four, the East had three, the Southwest two and the South and Far West, one each.

Notre Dame, generally regarded as the Nation's No. 1 team, placed three men on the first eleven and no other school got more than one. The "Fightin' Irish" on the team are Back Johnny Lujack, who led the balloting with 2086 out of a possible 2211 points, Tackle George Connor and Guard William Fischer.

Michigan's Big Nine champions were represented by their backfield star, Robert Chappuis and Southern Methodist's Mustangs placed their outstanding back, Doak Walker. The fourth backfield berth also went to a Southwesterner, Bobby Layne of Texas, who was a high school class mate of Walker's.

Lu Gambino, Maryland's high-scoring halfback; Quarterback Reaves Baysinger, jr., Tackle Dick Shimshak and Halfback Pete Williams of Navy were the only area players accorded honorable mention.

Southern Conference players on the honorable mention list included: Ends, Powell, North Carolina; Weir, Virginia; Tackles, Caughron, William & Mary; Fowler, North Carolina; Derogatis, Duke; Martin, Wake Forest; Mills, VMI; Smith, North Carolina; Guards, Leonetti and Wedel, Wake Forest; Center, Norman, Washington & Lee; Backs, Pupa, Justice and Rogers, North Carolina; Folger, Duke; Grimes, Bailey, Jones of Virginia; Ognovich, Wake Forest and Palmer, N. C. State.

West Virginia Invited to Bowl

Morgantown, W. Va., Nov. 26 (AP).—West Virginia University, whose head football coach, Bill Kern, announced his resignation only yesterday, has received an invitation to play in the Harbor Bowl game at San Diego, Calif., January 1.

Kern, whose team has won five and lost four games this season and winds up the season Saturday against Pitt at Pittsburgh, said he was resigning effective next June 30 for the "best interest" of himself and the university.

Lions Will Oppose Fast SMU Eleven

Dallas, Nov. 26 (AP).—Undefeated, untied Penn State today was selected to play Southern Methodist University in the Cotton Bowl and has accepted the invitation.

Penn State will be the first Eastern team to play in the Dallas gridiron classic since 1941, when Fordham met Texas A. and M.

The selection was announced by Dan D. Rogers, chairman of the board of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association, and followed a near-unanimous vote of the SMU football squad in favor of the Eastern powerhouse.

Southern Methodist hasn't completed its schedule, having yet to play Texas Christian University in the Southwest Conference race, but if the Mustangs beat TCU Saturday it will mean the Cotton Bowl will be the only bowl in the country with two undefeated, untied teams.

Negro Stars to Play

Penn State will be the first team with Negro members ever to play in Texas. Adequate provisions were made to handle the situation without incident.

Plans announced by the Cotton Bowl are for Penn State's squad to be housed at the Dallas Naval Air Station, which has a football field.

There will be no banquets or entertainments with the two teams present. Both schools expressed a desire that the players not be at such functions. The coaches and school officials will represent them.

Penn State, coached by Bob Higgins, played eight games this season, winding up the schedule last Saturday with a 29-0 decision over Pittsburgh. The Nittany Lions scored 319 points to 27 for the opposition.

Higgins to Scout Mustangs Saturday

State College, Pa., Nov. 26 (AP).—Penn State is not going to the Cotton Bowl for a "joy ride" but to win an important football game, Coach Bob Higgins said today following acceptance by the Nittany Lions of the New Year's Day invitation to play Southern Methodist at Dallas.

And as if to prove his words, Higgins flashed train reservations for a trip to scout the Southwest Mustangs in their final regular season game against Texas Christian Saturday.

Texas Tackles Aggies Today

College Station, Tex. Nov. 26 (AP).—Texas A. and M. peeked out from down around the cellar in the Southwest Conference today and took dead aim at a traditional foe—the University of Texas—with the idea of breaking a stranglehold that has tied the Aggies in knots for seven long seasons.

This colorful and bitter rivalry that has existed over a period of 54 years will bring a sell-out crowd of 41,000 into Kyle Field Stadium tomorrow.

Business Outlook

Paradox: Grain Market Rises, Yet Trade Bets on Price Drop

By J. A. Livingston

AT A HEARING before the Joint Economic Committee, Senator Ball, who comes from the flour-milling State of Minnesota, stumped Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, who comes from the cattle-and cotton-raising State of New Mexico. Ball wanted proof that speculative buying was pushing up the price of wheat and corn.

Livingston

Ball pointed out that cash (immediately deliverable) wheat now sells above $3 a bushel, but that wheat deliverable in September, 1948, can be bought for around $2.50. On the surface, that would indicate speculators are selling, not buying.

The reasoning goes like this: Speculators usually deal in futures, not cash commodities. They don't want to take physical possession of 5000 or 10,000 bushels of wheat and pay storage and insurance on it. And right now, people—speculators—seem to be betting that wheat, 10 months hence, will be down 16 per cent. So, isn't that proof that speculation is not boosting grain prices?

Anderson replied that he knows something about cattle and cattle feeding, but that he had never bought or sold a grain future in his life. He'd have to refer the Senator to the department's technicians.

WHAT IS HAPPENING in the grain pit is strictly unorthodox and not according to Boyle, James E., author of "Cost of Marketing Grain," "Speculation and the Chicago Board of Trade" and other books on agricultural marketing. Prior to the war, futures prices customarily were higher than cash. A future represented the cash price plus the cost of storage and insurance. The further off the future, the greater the premium over spot.

Today the market is "invert." As soon as it became evident that the United States once again would be the breadbasket for Europe, as soon as grain became scarce at the outbreak of the war, millers, bakers, corn refiners, cereal manufacturers and other grain users found it increasingly hard to get prompt delivery of particular types and grades of grain. So big buyers began warehousing their requirements. That reduced the available supply, lifted spot wheat to a premium over futures. And as manufacturers hedged these commitments, that tended to depress the futures markets.

But, you argue, hedging ought to wash out. Later these buyers will cover their short positions in the futures market, and futures prices will rise relative to cash prices. That didn't happen. Spot supplies became scarcer and scarcer. More and more processors put grain away in warehouses. That increased the shortage and increased the hedge selling in the futures market.

SPECULATIVE sentiment did a flipflop this year. Back in February, when talk of a recession was rampant, speculators were bearish. They were short five million bushels. Processors—hedgers—were long the same amount. By mid-September, positions were reversed and enlarged. Processors were long 43 million bushels, and speculators were short the same amount. Rising prices sucked in the doctors, lawyers, "housewives," barbers and butlers. That's what usually happens.

At the same time, speculation went on in spot. True, processors increased their sales of futures. But they did not hedge all the grain they bought. The Department of Agriculture has evidence that processors have on hand more unhedged grain than ever before. Similarly, the farmer held on to his grain. He speculated in spot, too. Thus, bullishness ran the entire gamut of the grain trade from farmer, to middleman, speculator and processor. Result: An inventory boom.

Yet, in the long run, most wheat buyers figure current prices are out of line. Wheat, for instance, is just about four times the 1909-14 average price of 88 cents and three times the 1935-39 price of 98 cents. Much the same may be said of corn. The grain trade realizes that when European production recovers, when foreign demand subsides, the United States will have a glut of wheat, the price will drop. So the futures market discounts current cash prices.

That does not mean that speculation hasn't boosted grain prices. The speculator knows that if spot prices rise, futures will follow. So, in buying a future, he bets on a short-term rise in spot. So, the speculator has made it possible for large processors to hedge part of their unprecedented stocks of grain. If the futures market had collapsed, the processors would have hesitated to hedge. Indeed, probably they'd have sold some of their cash holdings—lightened up. We mustn't forget that cash and futures prices interact on one another. They're two interdependent parts of the same market.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 26 (AP).—Cotton futures rallied sharply in late dealings today on a broad covering movement which met only limited offerings. Final prices were 30 points to $1.65 a bale higher. All deliveries from December through July reached new season's peaks. The buying surge reflected the growing tightness in the domestic cotton supply and active mill buying of spot cotton to cover needs later in the season. Some of the buying represented preholiday covering.

Armed Forces Unity Ends Abruptly at Franklin Field

ANNAPOLIS, MD., Nov. 26 (AP).—Armed force unity has its limit in the opinion of Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall—it's the entrance to Franklin Field at Philadelphia, where Army and Navy clash Saturday in the annual football classic.

The Secretary, writing at the invitation of the editors of the Annapolis Log—the Middies' humor magazine—said he had four reservations on the score of unification besides the affection for an interservice football game.

"First," he wrote, "a floor is not a 'deck'; second, the Navy word 'head' makes no sense at all; third, I will not try to tell the time of day by a xylophone; fourth, I can't even get my six feet five inches in a hammock, much less sleep in one . . ."

Royall's comment appeared along with one by Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan. Royall wasn't hesitant about picking Army to win. Adding that since the services were unified it "does not matter by what score the Army defeats the Navy."

He confessed he had cheered for Navy along with "thousands" of Army men "in those magnificent final five minutes" of last year's grid tussle in which Navy nearly tripped Army.

D.C. Firm Pays Two Extras, Ups Dividend

By S. Oliver Goodman

Thanksgiving cheer in four courses was served yesterday to stockholders of Lincoln Service Corp. of Washington. President Charles Delmar announced:

Delmar

1. An extra dividend of 50 cents a common share and an extra of 50 cents a share on 6 per cent participating preferred.

2. Directors placed the common on a $1.50 annual dividend basis, starting in 1948. The stock heretofore has been on a $1 annual basis.

3. Net earnings of $7.38 a common share for the first nine months this year were greater than for the full previous year, and compared with $4.93 a share in the like 1946 period.

4. Directors authorized further development in the five States and the District of Columbia in which the industrial banking firm now operates and expansion into several more States.

Delmar pointed out that the firm, whose headquarters are in the Woodward Building, now operates 31 branches and subsidiaries. Earnings so far this year, he said, are the best in the corporation's 16-year history.

In addition to the extra dividends, regular quarterly disbursements were voted as follows: 87½ cents a share on 7 per cent preferred; 37½ cents on 6 per cent participating preferred, and 25 cents a share on common. All dividends are payable December 12 to stock of record November 29.

Fight Mounts On Va. Fishing Area Extension

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 26 (AP).—Representatives of the United States power squadron in the Fifth Naval District and the Chesapeake Bay Yacht Racing Association met today "to consolidate opposition" to a proposal to extend fishing lines from the Virginia shore in the lower bay.

William H. Labrot, commodore of the Annapolis Yacht Club where the meeting was held, said small boat operators were vigorously opposed to "any extension of the fish net area whatsoever."

He said men at the meeting today represented 34,000 small boat owners in the bay.

Capt. George McCabe, Coast Guard captain of the Baltimore port, also was present to hear the yachtsmen's protest.

Lane Opposes Proposal

Both Governor Lane and John E. Clark, chairman of the Maryland Department of Tidewater Fisheries, already had expressed their opposition to the proposal to United States Army Engineers. They asserted enlarging the fish trap area would endanger the State's program of conserving fishery resources.

The yachtsmen's hostility grows from a fear of hazards to navigation, Labrot said.

The request to extend Virginia fishing lines was made by fishing concerns last summer and the Army Engineers have held one hearing on the matter. Another hearing is scheduled for Baltimore Tuesday.

In a letter to Secretary of the Army Royall last August, Governor Lane said he understood only two large fishing firms advocated the extension at the first hearing.

The lines now reach about 3 miles from shore in the section, Labrot said, and the desired extension would move them almost 5 miles from the coast.

"Any extension of the fish net area anywhere in the bay would be a menace to the navigation of small boats," he declared.

Virginia Legion Warns of Danger In War Trophies

Richmond, Va., Nov. 26 (AP).—Souvenir-hunting GI's have collected enough dangerous war trophies to endanger the lives of hundreds of persons in Virginia and cause damages amounting to several thousand dollars, the American Legion reported here today.

John H. Wickham, chairman of the Legion's War Trophies Safety Committee, said many of the weapons have fallen into the hands of gangsters.

In addition, returning veterans, he warned, have brought home land mines, grenades, shells, cartridges and automatic pistols and machine guns and tucked them away in their homes.

They are "too dangerous" to be stored away, he said, and should be handed over to a county sheriff or other law enforcement officer for deactivation.

Tuck to Limit Budget Requests

Richmond, Va., Nov. 26 (AP).—Governor Tuck made it clear today that he had no intention of asking the 1947 General Assembly for any program calling for major expansions.

The chief executive said he wanted to keep his 1948-50 budget recommendations in confidence until the Legislature convened in January, but he indicated that they will be on the conservative side.

"We are doing well," he declared, "to keep tongue and buckle together. That's what I have in mind."

3 State Policemen Injured in Crash

They reported something went wrong with the steering gear, causing the car to swerve off the road at South Division st. and Route 113.

23 Convicts Freed on Eve Of Holiday

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 26 (AP).—Twenty-three Marylanders who served terms in prison will be home for Thanksgiving Day tomorrow after receiving paroles or commutations from Governor Lane.

Among those released was LeRoy Tyler, 33, of Anne Arundel County who was convicted in 1930 of killing his grandmother by striking her with his fist. He will work on a farm.

Others paroled included:

John M. Marcell, sentenced to four years, March 20, 1946, by the St. Marys County Court to the House of Correction for manslaughter.

Archie K. Berge, not more than one year, May 7, 1947, Frederick County Court, reformatory, larceny.

Frank English, 10 years, March 21, 1944, St. Marys County Court, penitentiary, assault and robbery with a deadly weapon.

Margaret K. Paton, not over three years, March 12, 1947, Anne Arundel County Court, reformatory, bigamy.

David R. Stone, six years, June 5, 1945, Montgomery County Court, House of Correction, perverted sexual practice.

James P. Swann, three years, September 17, 1946, St. Marys County Court, penitentiary, stealing tobacco.

Naval Hero Enshrined At Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 26 (AP).—A photograph of Capt. Albert H. Rooks of Seattle, Wash., who won the Congressional Medal of Honor for his command of the Cruiser Houston in the Java Sea battle of March 1, 1942, was enshrined today in Memorial Hall at the Naval Academy.

His widow attended the unveiling ceremony along with the widow of Capt. Richard Gingrass, engineering officer who died in the same struggle against the Japanese.

Capt. William A. Corn delivered the eulogy at the ceremony, recalling incidents of Captain Rooks' life at the Naval Academy and when they were junior officers. Both were in the class of 1914.

He said, "the admiration of all officers of the Navy was awakened by his courageous fight to a finish in the Java Sea."

Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., Naval Academy superintendent, said the photograph and story of Captain Rooks would be an inspiration to midshipmen.

During the battle, the Houston and the Australian Cruiser Perth were surrounded by five Japanese cruisers, 11 destroyers and several motor torpedo boats in Sunda Strait, south of Java. The captain and 882 of his men went down with the Houston.

Of the crew, 260 were later picked up by the Japanese.

Attending the ceremony today were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Clarkson Bright, Capt. and Mrs. Robert D. Kirkpatrick, Capt. and Mrs. William A. Corn, Mrs. Don P. Moon, widow of Rear Admiral Moon, Mrs. Isaac Kidd, widow of Rear Admiral Kidd, who was killed at Pearl Harbor, Capt. T. Starr King and Capt. Frank T. Ward, commandant of midshipmen, and Mrs. Ward.

Security Group Names Arnold

By The Associated Press

Owen J. Roberts, former United States Supreme Court Justice, now chairman of the National Security Committee, yesterday announced the appointment of Remmie L. Arnold of Petersburg, Va., to the committee's advisory board.

Roberts said he felt Arnold had an opportunity "to help our country avoid the tragic mistakes that contributed so greatly to the last World War."

"We can, by a process of education and information, aid people in realizing that only a balanced and comprehensive program for national security, of which universal military training is an essential element, will provide our country with the military preparedness necessary to secure an enduring peace," the former justice said.

Husband Guilty in Death Of Ex-'Tattooed Lady'

Baltimore, Nov. 26 (AP).—Lawrence Riemer, 37, was convicted today of manslaughter in the death of his 53-year-old wife, Agnes, a former "tatooed lady" in a sideshow. Judge Joseph Sherbow deferred sentence until next week.

Senator George to Succeed Webb on Md. Roads Body

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 26 (AP).—Governor Lane appointed Senator Joseph M. George (D., Queen Anne) to suceed P. Watson Webb of Cambridge as a member of the State Roads Commission today.

The Governor said several months ago Webb had informed him of his desire to retire from the post, but at Lane's request he withheld his resignation pending completion of the basic plans for the new 175-million-dollar State highway program.

Under the law, one member of the commission must be a resident of the Eastern Shore, one of the Western Shore and the other of Baltimore City.

Senator George, 59, lives at Sudlersville, where he operates a large grain and feed business. He has had a long and varied career in the State Legislature.

Governor Lane said Senator George had made a study of the highway systems of the country over a period of years and in the 1947 General Assembly "was instrumental in the adoption of the new scale of truck license fees which increased the revenues of the State Roads Commission by approximately three million dollars."

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

See the Freedom Train . . .
Union Station, Today and Tomorrow!

There is only one freedom: FREEDOM of CHOICE!

Freedom of choice is our great American heritage, symbolized by the Freedom Train bearing the precious documents which for a century and a half have proclaimed and protected it.

Freedom of choice is what we mean when we say "The American Way."

Freedom of choice for all individuals has made the United States the most powerful nation on earth, given its people the highest standards of living in all history, provided opportunity for the humblest to exercise their talents and industry.

Freedom of choice means:

Freedom to choose our own way to worship God,

Freedom to choose those who govern us and to choose to praise or criticize their actions;

Freedom to speak our minds as we choose;

Freedom to choose our occupations and professions;

Freedom to choose where we want to work and where we want to live;

Freedom to choose the goods we buy, the kinds of food we eat, the clothing we wear, the books we read, the motion pictures we see.

Freedom of choice, unrestricted except when it denies equal freedom of choice to others, is the sire of American initiative and competitive enterprise.

Freedom of choice is the creator and arch-stone of the American free market place of spirited rivalry and competition.

Freedom of choice is the very essence of American progress, having made us in war the Arsenal of Democracy, and in peace the hope and salvation of an impoverished and dispirited world.

Freedom of choice is the antithesis of collectivist ideologies, totalitarian regimes, governmental regimentation, planned economy, cartels and monopolies.

Freedom of choice is indivisible. When a part is taken away, that which remains is no longer freedom. Once economic freedom—the freedom of the market place—is lost, political freedom, religious freedom, freedom of press and speech, all will fall.

Americans appropriately will find the Freedom Train a rallying point for a rededication of our lives to preservation of mankind's most precious possession—freedom of choice.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Widow, College Graduate, Becomes Alcoholic After Husband Dies and Facetiously Resists Her Sister's Reformer Zeal; Latter Despairs

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My sister Gertrude, a college graduate, was happily married for some few years. She is now a widow and lives with me and my husband. Shortly after her husband's death she became a drink addict and at present is very fond of gin.

When I visit my friends she insists on going with me; and invariably she becomes intoxicated to such an extent that she insists on reciting Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address," or the old D'Arcy ballad, "The Face On The Barroom Floor," or staging other nonsensical acts—all of which is very embarrassing to me.

Poopoohs Idea Of Joining AA's

IN FACT, her behavior is making a nervous wreck of me; and I have tried repeatedly to make her join Alcoholics Anonymous, which she refuses to do. Instead, she assures me that alcohol is a great source of comfort when one is depressed, and says if she joins any group, it will be the Women's Republican Club.

Incidentally, my husband is a heavy drinker, too; and he says he will not quit unless my sister agrees to cooperate. In the circumstances, what should I do: Should I have Gertrude committed to a House of Correction for six months? Or should I put both of them out of my life, and try to get back to normal healthy existence?

I have been extremely reluctant to seek outside help with this grievous problem, but the example of others, in bringing similar troubles to your attention, gives me courage at last to write and ask your wise counsel for myself. Please answer soon. L. S.

Widow's Running Away From Life

DEAR L. S.: First, you can dismiss the idea of trying to commit Gertrude to a disciplinary institution or custodial hospital against her wishes, if there is no evidence to prove beyond shadow of doubt that she is either a criminal character or a person of unsound mind. And I gather there isn't.

Gertrude's alcoholism which developed in the wake of her husband's death, coupled with the fact that she took refuge with you and has become your social shadow wherever you go, suggests that she is an infantile personality: afraid of life and very distrustful of her ability to cope with it on the adult level.

At the same time, her impulse is to be buoyant, convivial and gay. She hungers for friends and group-acceptance. But she is too timid—as some would say, too shy—to compete, as it were, for notice in the social arena, unless specially fortified by various props to her quaking ego.

If her youth wasn't satisfactory, at least she was sustained in the hope that future years would compensate, by bringing love and related good fortune as permanent treasure. Then during her marriage she had her husband to fall back on, in social situations where otherwise she might have felt forlorn, ignored or vaguely threatened by her inner deficiencies.

Shy Arrogance Is Her Handicap

AFTER his death she seized blindly on John Barleycorn as her supposed friend, her source of courage and consolation in hours of lonely terror or times of social stress; and when "under the influence," her infantile neurotic fears are temporarily anesthetized, so that she feels jubilantly free to behave as her fancy dictates. And doubtless with her it is wish-fulfillment to take the floor as the "life of the party."

In compulsively throwing herself away on drink, as seems to be her present tendency, Gertrude is doing herself a great injustice. The lightning glimpse your letter gives of her suggests a basically gifted, delightful personality, whose life could be richly interesting and useful if she would discover, develop and put her trust in her real potentials.

Owing to a certain shy sensitivity, and perhaps also to a dash of pseudo-intellectual arrogance, she is cheating herself in holding aloof from Alcoholics Anonymous: a group more successful than any other human agency in rescuing persons from the psychological vortex into which she is slipping; and a group, moreover, that by and large is very good company by any standard of social reckoning.

Thus my counsel in this instance is addressed to Gertrude, not you; but it is an affirmation of your insistent recommendation, namely, to join AA with an open mind, thus doing herself an inestimable favor and giving your husband the salvationary benefit of a wise example. M. H.

HIS MAJESTY, THE GOBBLER!—Roasted to a turn and garnished with greenery and cranberry mounds, he awaits the master carver's hand

For the Awkward Carving Squad

How to K. O. Mr. Gobbler on the Platter

By Lucia Brown

If you can carve up a 20-pound gobbler with a few deft twists and slashes of the knife and keep all the parsley on the platter at the same time, then this little essay is not for you.

But . . .

If you spend agonizing moments of indecision trying to decide where to make the first cut in the bird . . .

If you're sometimes tempted to put your knee on the creature's carcass to keep it from leaping off the platter . . .

If you generally wind up with a mass of hunks and shreds and a few broken bones (yours and the turkey's) . . .

Then listen to these words of wisdom from a carving expert with one of the Nation's largest poultry trade organizations:

First, a Sharp Weapon

Stand up while you're carving the turkey and you'll find the job easier. Carve the side of the bird away from you.

Whether the fowl should be placed with the legs to the left or the right of you depends entirely on which hand you use for cutting. If you're right-handed, place the legs to the right. If left-handed, to the left.

Before you begin to carve, cut the skin away from the cavities of the bird to make it easy to remove the stuffing when the time comes.

The following are the five steps in an easy and orderly attack on His Majesty:

(1) Remove the leg on the side you plan to carve first. (It's better to carve up one whole side, then work on the other if necessary.) To remove leg, hold drumstick firmly with thumb and forefinger. Cut through skin by drawing knife back and forth, and sever joint.

Press leg away from body with flat side of knife, then cut remaining skin on back. Try to remove the oyster (choice dark meat in spoon-shaped bone on the back) with the leg. Place leg on service platter.

(2) Disjoint drumstick and thigh by holding leg at right angles to plate and cutting through meat to the bone. Then, holding thigh with knife, press drumstick down with other hand until joint snaps.

Slicing the Drumstick

(3) To slice leg meat, hold drumstick at right angles to plate and cut down, turning leg to get uniform slices. To slice thigh meat, straddle the bone with fork and cut meat in lengthwise strips.

(4) Remove wing by placing knife at right angles to breast about 1½ inches above wing and cutting straight down through skin and wing joint.

(5) To slice breast meat, straddle keel bone with fork or insert fork in rib section on side opposite that being carved. Hold knife parallel to breast and cut with a sawing motion, starting first slice just above the place where wing was removed. Cut slices about ⅜ inch thick.

Each side of a 20-pound turkey will yield about 14 slices of dark meat, 16 slices of white meat and a wing.

It's Home for Thanksgiving

Capital Families Gather To Celebrate Turkey Day

By Marie McNair

TURKEY DAY is a family day in Washington this year.

With the passing of the late Mrs. Edward B. McLean went also a tradition—her Thanksgiving Day breakfasts—which official society enjoyed for many years.

Today, with the food conservation program in effect, "the bird" will have its place on a table set for 6 rather than 60.

Mrs. George Mesta has her family with her; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies are entertaining their family for luncheon and Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken have asked Senator Arthur Vandenberg to share their turkey, as Mrs. Vandenberg is still recuperating from a serious illness in Detroit. With the MacCrackens also will be Jack Logan and their son and daughter-in-law, Lewis and Francine.

Mr. and Mrs. George Tyson are down from Boston to be with Mrs. Mesta, who is Mrs. Tyson's sister, and at the family dinner this evening will be Mrs. Mesta's niece, Betty Tyson—now Mrs. J. M. Richardson Lyethe, jr.—who has brought her 3-month-old daughter from Detroit to visit "Aunt Perle" for several weeks. Mrs. Tyson, too, has planned to be here for the same period of time.

Noontime today will find David Parker and his sister Miss Martha Lake Parker entertaining at cocktails for a small group of their friends who'll be going from there to Thanksgiving Day luncheons.

Mr. and Mrs. McGill James, Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner and Mrs. Matthew J. Whittall, will be there and others are Tristano Gabrici, First Secretary of the Italian Embassy; the Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Sanz-Briz; Miss Elma Baker and brother, George; Albert Cousins and Earl Mulehahey, over from Baltimore; Miss Eugenia Payne, Ralph McBane, Miss Oretta Lais and her brother, Lucio Lais; Dr. and Mrs. Walter Wells, Norman James, Miss Betty Vinson, Mrs. Eugenia Payne and Miss Nancy Payne.

Ralph McKee will give a buffet supper this evening for his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph McKee and Maj. and Mrs. Eric Bark, who recently returned to Washington after a year in Germany. Mrs. Bark is Mr. McKee's cousin.

Can you tell me the best way to bleach white silk lingerie and blouses which have become yellow? Are there any precautions that I might take in the future to prevent silk from yellowing?

B. R. D.

Silk can be bleached with sodium preborate. Soak the freshly washed garment for a half hour in a solution of 4 tablespoons of sodium perborate to a pint of soapy water. If this doesn't remove all of the yellow discoloration, a good way to freshen them would be to tint them one of the lovely pastel colors. To prevent silk from yellowing, wash always in lukewarm water with a mild soap and add a little bluing to the rinse water. Dry in the shade, or in the dark.

Will you tell me where I could learn to paint china? Any other information on the subject would be most gratefully received.

K. C. P.

There is a teacher of china painting in Takoma Park. She can be reached at Shephard 4660. She tells me that she has all of the students she can take care of at present, but can possibly take on some new students after Christmas.

I have twelve each of tall and short sherberts, goblets and dessert plates of the "Arctic Rose" pattern which I would gladly exchange for the same in Cambridge "Rosepoint," or for separate pieces. Do you know of a shop which would take these pieces? I am leaving the city in December. M. G. S.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Widow, College Graduate, Becomes Alcoholic After Husband Dies and Facetiously Resists Her Sister's Reformer Zeal; Latter Despairs

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My sister Gertrude, a college graduate, was happily married for some few years. She is now a widow and lives with me and my husband. Shortly after her husband's death she became a drink addict and at present is very fond of gin.

When I visit my friends she insists on going with me; and invariably she becomes intoxicated to such an extent that she insists on reciting Lincoln's "Gettysburg Address," or the old D'Arcy ballad, "The Face On The Barroom Floor," or staging other nonsensical acts—all of which is very embarrassing to me.

Poopoohs Idea Of Joining AA's

IN FACT, her behavior is making a nervous wreck of me; and I have tried repeatedly to make her join Alcoholics Anonymous, which she refuses to do. Instead, she assures me that alcohol is a great source of comfort when one is depressed, and says if she joins any group, it will be the Women's Republican Club.

Incidentally, my husband is a heavy drinker, too; and he says he will not quit unless my sister agrees to cooperate. In the circumstances, what should I do: Should I have Gertrude committed to a House of Correction for six months? Or should I put both of them out of my life, and try to get back to normal healthy existence?

I have been extremely reluctant to seek outside help with this grievous problem, but the example of others, in bringing similar troubles to your attention, gives me courage at last to write and ask your wise counsel for myself. Please answer soon. L. S.

Widow's Running Away From Life

DEAR L. S.: First, you can dismiss the idea of trying to commit Gertrude to a disciplinary institution or custodial hospital against her wishes, if there is no evidence to prove beyond shadow of doubt that she is either a criminal character or a person of unsound mind. And I gather there isn't.

Gertrude's alcoholism which developed in the wake of her husband's death, coupled with the fact that she took refuge with you and has become your social shadow wherever you go, suggests that she is an infantile personality: afraid of life and very distrustful of her ability to cope with it on the adult level.

At the same time, her impulse is to be buoyant, convivial and gay. She hungers for friends and group-acceptance. But she is too timid—as some would say, too shy—to compete, as it were, for notice in the social arena, unless specially fortified by various props to her quaking ego.

If her youth wasn't satisfactory, at least she was sustained in the hope that future years would compensate, by bringing love and related good fortune as permanent treasure. Then during her marriage she had her husband to fall back on, in social situations where otherwise she might have felt forlorn, ignored or vaguely threatened by her inner deficiencies.

Shy Arrogance Is Her Handicap

AFTER his death she seized blindly on John Barleycorn as her supposed friend, her source of courage and consolation in hours of lonely terror or times of social stress; and when "under the influence," her infantile neurotic fears are temporarily anesthetized, so that she feels jubilantly free to behave as her fancy dictates. And doubtless with her it is wish-fulfillment to take the floor as the "life of the party."

In compulsively throwing herself away on drink, as seems to be her present tendency, Gertrude is doing herself a great injustice. The lightning glimpse your letter gives of her suggests a basically gifted, delightful personality, whose life could be richly interesting and useful if she would discover, develop and put her trust in her real potentials.

Owing to a certain shy sensitivity, and perhaps also to a dash of pseudo-intellectual arrogance, she is cheating herself in holding aloof from Alcoholics Anonymous: a group more successful than any other human agency in rescuing persons from the psychological vortex into which she is slipping; and a group, moreover, that by and large is very good company by any standard of social reckoning.

Thus my counsel in this instance is addressed to Gertrude, not you; but it is an affirmation of your insistent recommendation, namely, to join AA with an open mind, thus doing herself an inestimable favor and giving your husband the salvationary benefit of a wise example. M. H.

HIS MAJESTY, THE GOBBLER!—Roasted to a turn and garnished with greenery and cranberry mounds, he awaits the master carver's hand

For the Awkward Carving Squad

How to K. O. Mr. Gobbler on the Platter

By Lucia Brown

If you can carve up a 20-pound gobbler with a few deft twists and slashes of the knife and keep all the parsley on the platter at the same time, then this little essay is not for you.

But . . .

If you spend agonizing moments of indecision trying to decide where to make the first cut in the bird . . .

If you're sometimes tempted to put your knee on the creature's carcass to keep it from leaping off the platter . . .

If you generally wind up with a mass of hunks and shreds and a few broken bones (yours and the turkey's) . . .

Then listen to these words of wisdom from a carving expert with one of the Nation's largest poultry trade organizations:

First, a Sharp Weapon

A sharp knife is the key to sharp carving, he says, so get yours well whetted before the company gathers around the festive board.

Stand up while you're carving the turkey and you'll find the job easier. Carve the side of the bird away from you.

Whether the fowl should be placed with the legs to the left or the right of you depends entirely on which hand you use for cutting. If you're right-handed, place the legs to the right. If left-handed, to the left.

Before you begin to carve, cut the skin away from the cavities of the bird to make it easy to remove the stuffing when the time comes.

The following are the five steps in an easy and orderly attack on His Majesty:

(1) Remove the leg on the side you plan to carve first. (It's better to carve up one whole side, then work on the other if necessary.) To remove leg, hold drumstick firmly with thumb and forefinger. Cut through skin by drawing knife back and forth, and sever joint.

Press leg away from body with flat side of knife, then cut remaining skin on back. Try to remove the oyster (choice dark meat in spoon-shaped bone on the back) with the leg. Place leg on service platter.

(2) Disjoint drumstick and thigh by holding leg at right angles to plate and cutting through meat to the bone. Then, holding thigh with knife, press drumstick down with other hand until joint snaps.

Slicing the Drumstick

(3) To slice leg meat, hold drumstick at right angles to plate and cut down, turning leg to get uniform slices. To slice thigh meat, straddle the bone with fork and cut meat in lengthwise strips.

(4) Remove wing by placing knife at right angles to breast about 1½ inches above wing and cutting straight down through skin and wing joint.

(5) To slice breast meat, straddle keel bone with fork or insert fork in rib section on side opposite that being carved. Hold knife parallel to breast and cut with a sawing motion, starting first slice just above the place where wing was removed. Cut slices about ⅜ inch thick.

Each side of a 20-pound turkey will yield about 14 slices of dark meat, 16 slices of white meat and a wing.

It's Home for Thanksgiving

Capital Families Gather To Celebrate Turkey Day

By Marie McNair

TURKEY DAY is a family day in Washington this year.

With the passing of the late Mrs. Edward B. McLean went also a tradition—her Thanksgiving Day breakfasts—which official society enjoyed for many years.

Today, with the food conservation program in effect, "the bird" will have its place on a table set for 6 rather than 60.

Mrs. George Mesta has her family with her; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies are entertaining their family for luncheon and Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken have asked Senator Arthur Vandenberg to share their turkey, as Mrs. Vandenberg is still recuperating from a serious illness in Detroit. With the MacCrackens also will be Jack Logan and their son and daughter-in-law, Lewis and Francine.

Mr. and Mrs. George Tyson are down from Boston to be with Mrs. Mesta, who is Mrs. Tyson's sister, and at the family dinner this evening will be Mrs. Mesta's niece, Betty Tyson—now Mrs. J. M. Richardson Lyethe, jr.—who has brought her 3-month-old daughter from Detroit to visit "Aunt Perle" for several weeks. Mrs. Tyson, too, has planned to be here for the same period of time.

Noontime today will find David Parker and his sister Miss Martha Lake Parker entertaining at cocktails for a small group of their friends who'll be going from there to Thanksgiving Day luncheons.

Mr. and Mrs. McGill James, Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner and Mrs. Matthew J. Whittall, will be there and others are Tristano Gabrici, First Secretary of the Italian Embassy; the Second Secretary of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Sanz-Briz; Miss Elma Baker and brother, George; Albert Cousins and Earl Mulchahey, over from Baltimore; Miss Eugenia Payne, Ralph McBane, Miss Oretta Lais and her brother, Lucio Lais; Dr. and Mrs. Walter Wells, Norman James, Miss Betty Vinson, Mrs. Eugenia Payne and Miss Nancy Payne.

Ralph McKee will give a buffet supper this evening for his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph McKee and Maj. and Mrs. Eric Bark, who recently returned to Washington after a year in Germany. Mrs. Bark is Mr. McKee's cousin.

Attorney General Clark Speaks At Freedom Train Luncheon

By Genevieve Reynolds

Approximately 225 women plus a sprinkling of men turned out yesterday to hear the United States Attorney General, Tom Clark, discuss the origin and significance of the Freedom Train, scheduled to arrive in the Nation's Capital today. Occasion was a joint Freedom Train luncheon sponsored by the Soroptimist and the Women's Advertising Clubs of Washington in the Washington Hotel.

"The importance of the Freedom Train is that it points up other ideologies in the world today that are attempting to destroy the freedom of religion upon which this country was founded," declared the Attorney General.

"There is only one true revolution," he continued. "That is the one our forefathers staged for the freedom of us all—not the ones staged so some gangster could take over."

The Freedom Train, which has grown to eight cars filled with some 100 historic documents, started in Philadelphia September 17, 1947 on the 170th anniversary of the birth of our Nation. "The idea originated and developed in the office of the Attorney General," he explained, "and was taken over by a group of enthusiastic and philanthropic private citizens, representating industry, labor, finance, education and the churches."

Liberty Bell's Impression

The speaker said that in his opinion one can discover the heartbeat of America in the documents of the Freedom Train. Recalling how as a small boy he once had his photograph made with the Liberty Bell as it passed through Texas, he thought that if the Liberty Bell could be brought to the focus of every American all would understand better their great blessings.

When the people of 300 American cities see the great documents —Mayflower Pact through the Truman Doctrine—each will rededicate himself or herself to the true principles of freedom, according to the Attorney General. "In rededicating yourself thus you will help solve the domestic problems and in so doing will strengthen the world," he predicted.

At Head Table

Ralph Pittman, president of the Texas State Society, introduced the speaker, and Mrs. Jean Ambrose, president, presided and introduced guests at the head table and special guests. Mrs. Rose Robison Cowen, Soroptimist president, repeated the Freedom Pledge. Several musical numbers, including the "Freedom Train," were given by the Potomac Electric Glee Club.

Among those at the head table were the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force, Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney; the Commandant of the Marine Corps, Gen. A. A. Vandegrift; Maj. Gen. Emmett O'Donnell of the Air Force, Commodore E. M. Eller, USN, director of public information for the United States Navy.

Special guests included Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice; Mrs. Oscar Ewing, wife of the Federal Security Administrator; Mrs. Tom Clark, wife of the speaker;

It's Fearful, Wonderful In New York; Brown Mink's Old Style, It Must Be Blue

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 26.—New York is a fearful, wonderful place — overcrowded, outrageously expensive, with simple lace evening gowns selling at four hundred smackers, hats starting at sixty, meatless day fare, such as pheasant, a mere seven-fifty a plate. Dollar blessed females have new ways of spending. Brown mink is too common, smart eateries are filled with ladies muffled in tippets and great coats of white bluemarked mink. At the Colony Restaurant, where scores of world familiars are on exhibit, mealtimes Mrs. Alan Corey, whose husband is in steel, pins an orchid studded in coffee and white diamonds to her simple blouse. Frank Sinatra beaus Lana Turner, her near white curls topped by near white felt swirled with a polka dot veil. Mrs. Orson Munn, who has debuted into top-notch dressmaking, pins on 10 ash blond curls, lets them dangle behind.

FRANK SINATRA

Anita Loos, dark bangs falling over eyebrows, glowers morosely from a corner seat. George McDonald, the papal marquis and Gotham's handsomest older bachelor, entertains a Detroit widow with emerald gobs dropping waist length and halo hat awash with paradise. The Jim Farleys, still in wedding mood, had Irene Dunne's husband, Dr. Griffin, and Louis B. Mayer in tow, while Greta Garbo, painfully plain in gray suit and black hat, was with George Schlee, Russian husband of luxury designer Valentina. Marlene Dietrich, out with her agent, looks beautiful but sad.

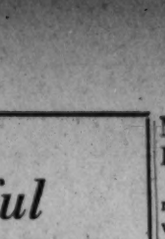
Duchess' Frocks Unbecoming

THE WINDSORS are back in town looking unusually healthy. Her Grace's new clothes cause no end of comment. Most agree they are unbecoming. The duchess likes a three-tiered coat dress job and wears a pillbox pushed way back on her head. Because they mill around constantly with the same group of friends, Elsa Maxwell has decided to launch them in a more intellectual milieu. Tuesday night she gave a dinner in their honor inviting such headliners as the Warren Austins and Brazil's Senhor and Senhora Aranha. So far the Windsors' impact on the United Nations intellectuality is unknown.

DUCHESS OF WINDSOR

Commotion in the Theater

TWO SHOWS are causing fashionable commotion. First, Katharine Cornell and Godfrey Tearle are opening tonight in what must be a middle-aged version of "Anthony and Cleopatra." Second, Irene Selznick's production of Tennessee Williams oddly named drama "A Street Car Named Desire." Williams authored the sad, sad, sad "Glass Menagerie," which gave Laurette Taylor opportunity for such a glowing comeback. Williams' Opus opened in Princeton and well-wishers commuted out and back reporting it a surefire success.



CLARE LUCE

Meanwhile, Clare Luce, who has just bought one of those blue-white mink coats, is off to California. She will pull down the tidy sum of $100,000 to adapt C. S. Lewis' "The Screwtape Letters" for Darryl Zanuck. The popular British professor who lectures on religion authored this series of brilliant articles in the guise of letters from the devil to his nephew. It will be a tough job to doctor and require all the well known Luce literary skill.

Mrs. Hellmuth Returns From Virginia Stay

Mrs. William F. Hellmuth has returned from a visit of several weeks in Virginia where she was engaged in Senator Raymond Guest's successful campaign for election to the Virginia State Legislature.

Flemings Have Daughter

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Fleming, jr., announce the birth of a daughter, Carter Augusta, on November 24, at Columbia Hospital. The baby is the granddaughter of Mrs. Hugh Neely Fleming and the late Mr. Fleming of Erie, Pa., and of the late Mr. and Mrs. George E. Davis of Louisville, Ky., and Norfolk, Va.

Ask Anne

able to dispose of the pieces before you must leave town, why not run an ad in The Washington Post?

Being a novice in the laundering department, can you tell me how properly to starch organdy bedroom curtains? How much starch is used? I have thought of purchasing bottle starch. Does one rinse again after starching? Do you suppose it would be possible to starch in an automatic washer by using the starch during the rinsing process.

I. S.

To starch curtains stiff, use 1 cup bottled starch to 2 cups of water. This amount will be enough to starch one pair of curtains. If you have three pairs, for instance, make three times this amount. If you use the dry laundry starch, allow 3 tablespoons of dry starch and 1 quart of water for each curtain. Follow the directions on the package of dry starch for making. Make enough starch for all of the curtains; put the starch into the laundry tub and put in all of the freshly washed and rinsed curtains at one time. Dip up and down in the starch solution and wring out. Do not rinse after starching. Dry as usual. To me, it seems much simpler to starch the curtains in the tub after the rinsing is complete rather than adding the starch to the last rinse. Then too, such large quantities of starch would be needed if you added it to the rinse water that it would be a waste of starch.

What can I do to get rid of red ants? They are all over my place, from living room to kitchen, and into everything. I have used red pepper and also spray.

M. W.

Watch the ants to see whether, after obtaining food, they carry it outdoors or into cracks in the woodwork. If they disappear into cracks, squirt kerosene in with an oil can and close the cracks with cotton wool dipped in kerosene. Some of the syrup preparations sold in drug stores such as "Terro" and "Antro" are also quite effective. Put a spot of the syrup on a cardboard and place it in the path of the ants. The ants take this back to the nests and in this way the queen may be killed—the only sure way of getting rid of the nest permanently.

The broiler-tray of my stove is granitewear which turns coal black whenever I broil meat. Is there any easier method of removing the black than scouring with steel wool and scouring powder until one is ready to drop dead with exhaustion and disgust? W. W. W.

Saturate a cloth or paper towel with household ammonia, leave it on the broiler tray over night in the closed oven. The next morning the grease should be softened and come off readily when scoured.

I have a yellow all-wool sweater which has been washed successfully several times in lukewarm water, but which shrunk very badly when unintentionally washed in hot water I managed to force it over a sweater frame dryer, but when removed it was still extremely small. Is there any way the sweater can be restored to its former shape? G. C.

There is a chance that if you will wash your sweater again in lukewarm water, rinse and gently pull it in all directions to enlarge it, you might make it large enough to wear. Too hot water will permanently mat yarn and take out its elasticity. So, if the sweater doesn't react to the rewashing treatment, there is nothing further which can be done short of ravelling it out and reknitting it. And even that may not be advisable if the yarn appears too harsh.

I have two new pairs of 51 gauge seamless nylons which look badly streaked in color. They look too bad to be worn at all. Can anything be done about the streaks? G. C.

The only way to obliterate the streaks would be to dye the hose a darker color. Prepare the dye solution in a glass fruit jar and drop the freshly washed hose into it. Shake and let stand 20 minutes or until as dark as desired. Rinse and dry.

Their First Thanksgiving

Polish Girls Study Agriculture at Virginia Turkey Farms

By Kay Mackley

ON TURKEY farms in the rich lowlands of the Shenandoah Valley—a lavish contrast to their own broken Poland—21-year-old Janina Swiostek and Barbara Maliszewska today are celebrating their first Thanksgiving.

However, it isn't the abundance of the land and their opportunity to share in that abundance that awakens in them the spirit of Thanksgiving. In the best English she can muster, Janina . . . folks in this country call her Jane . . . declares: "I'm thankful I can learn so much; that I can know different places and meet different people; that I can learn progress and American life."

Jane and Barbara are two of the 10 students from the University of Agriculture in Warsaw who came to this country last July to study improved farm methods.

It all started last winter when Thurl Metzger, representative of the Church of the Brethren, was in Warsaw at the invitation of UNRRA, supervising distribution of heifers sent abroad by the Brethren Service Commission.

Church People Aid

Then came the idea. In America were good church folk who would gladly teach these young people modern methods of agriculture right on their farms. Theory and practice could go hand in hand.

The plan matured quickly. Brethren Service Commission would sponsor the project. Farmers, poultrymen, orchardists—Methodists, Mennonites, Brethren, Episcopalians—would train the students. Getting permission for them to leave Poland for a year took about six months.

Eight of the 10 had their first English lessons at the Church World Service Center at New Windsor, Md., which is operated by BSC, and where they spent about a month studying the language and catching on to American ways.

In August they fanned out across the East and Middle West to their assignments.

Contact had been made with Charles W. Wampler, sr., co-owner with his two brothers, F. C. and J. D. Wampler, and their sons of the Wampler Feed & Seed Co., in Harrisonburg, Va., and of 24 farms scattered through the Shenandoah Valley, Colorado and Texas.

Here was the perfect set-up for the two girls to learn poultry raising on a large scale. Mr. Wampler, organizer and, until last year, president of the National Turkey Federation, placed the girls in nearby homes situated directly across the road from each other. Jane lives with a Brethren family, Mr. and Mrs. David Shirkey, while Barbara makes her homes with one of Mr. Wampler's farmers, Simon Tice, a Mennonite, and his wife. That girls should be making the poultry business their life work may seem strange to some of the neighbors but not to Barbara and Jane. In Poland poultry raising is a woman's work.

BARBARA MALISZEWSKA
. . . visitor from Warsaw

The broad acres and the large poultry houses where they have been applying the two years of training they received at the university are in wide contrast to the small farms on which they grew up.

Barbara's, near a village 30 miles from Warsaw, was between 40 and 50 acres—middle-sized for Poland.

The war took no one, permanently, from Jane's immediate family. The Swiosteks, father, mother, one son and three daughters, had a small farm on the edge of the forest 80 miles south of Warsaw.

In America the girls have found much they like. They are fond of music. "Classical, not jazz," says Jane. "Sometimes jazz," says Barbara. They agree on hiking and picnics, reading and dancing—excelling most Americans on the last point—but they disagree on bowling. Barbara loved it the first time she tried it. But not Jane. The American people they have found very kind and understanding; the girls are extremely grateful for this.

Eager to Return

But do they want to stay in America? Both answer a very definite "no." Even tempted with glowing preparations for Thanksgiving—which always means a family gathering at the Shirkey home, with golden brown turkey, orange pumpkins and ice cream—Barbara replies, "No place like home." She admits she learned that in America.

When Jane and Barbara sit down to Thanksgiving dinner, the handsome brown bird on the table will be not just another holiday turkey but a symbol of the friendship, the learning and the good American way of living which they will one day take back to share with the people of Poland.

IT'S A GOOD THING ROSS ISN'T A WAR CONTRACTOR

Rosiland Abrahams of 2901 18th st. nw. was a guest at a recording session for WTOP's "You're the Top" show the other day.

When the talk got around to pumpkin pie, Rosiland revealed that she'd never tasted this traditional Thanksgiving delicacy—because she'd just come over from England within the year.

Announcer Ross Martin immediately decreed that Miss Abrahams must have some pumpkin pie forthwith, and sent out for a pie with the following results:

MISS ABRAHAMS

This hands-across-the-sea gesture of friendship made a big hit with Rosalind. But now that she's learning how to be an American, we might as well tell her the whole story.

The price of the pie went on Martin's expense account.

LET'S NOT CARRY THIS TOO FUR, JOHN

John T. Patton of Silver Spring, Md., sends me a clipping about the theft of four automobiles. The caption over the item reads:

"Fur Cars Stolen."

"Maybe that's why cars are so expensive these days," muses John. "They're making them of silver fox."

NOT THANKFUL HE

Today we hold Thanksgiving
For our unnumbered joys.
And with a zest for living
We make a festive noise.

But one of us is deep in gloom,
'Neath clouds so dark and murky.
For him it is a day of doom—
For he's our friend the turkey.

THANKSGIVING PROBLEM

One of the many things for which I am thankful is that J. H. Ford of 2853 Ontario rd. nw., doesn't send me a problem every day.

After struggling for about an hour, I think I have the answer to this one, which he submitted:

Mr. Jones gets into his car, and starts a trip "back home" for Thanksgiving Day. But after one hour, his car develops mechanical difficulties which slow its speed by 40 per cent.

This causes Mr. Jones to arrive two hours late. In discussing the trip later, he calculates that if the trouble hadn't begun until 50 miles farther on, he would have arrived 40 minutes sooner than he did.

The question is: How far did Mr. Jones travel?

After a good deal of mental anguish, I arrived at an answer which you'll find printed upside-down at the end of this column.

It's the best I could do, and I'm giving no guarantees that it's right. Don't peek until you've tried to solve the problem yourself.

I'M DROOLING

So you'd like to get your hands on a pair of tickets to the Army-Navy game, eh? Well, it's really very simple. For example:

When Movie Actor Robert Montgomery wanted transportation to Washington recently, he contacted his old Navy sidekick Ed Hicks, who is local passenger service manager for American Airlines.

During the actor's visit, he and Hicks had a wonderful reunion, in the course of which many a Jap vessel was sent to the bottom for the second time.

Then Montgomery went back to Hollywood, and Hicks went back to wishing that he had a couple of ducats for the Army-Navy game.

Wishing, according to the song, will make it so. The other morning, there arrived a letter from Montgomery—and inclosed were two lovely tickets for the big game.

See how simple it is?

I GET THE POINT

In a knitting item the other day, I said that "one of Mrs. Sittenfeld's hobbies is knitting magazines."

The boys at the Yellow Cab office raise an eyebrow, and remark that they've never seen anybody knit a magazine.

Giving me the (knitting) needles, eh?

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four-month-old pup, very intelligent and playful." (Falls Church 1537R).

ANSWER TO PROBLEM

The only way I can figure it, Mr. Jones traveled 200 miles, starting at 50 miles per hour, and slowing down to 30 miles per hour after the first hour.

When Friar Solly Violinsky was asked if he would attend, he said: "At 1 o'clock? Don't be silly. I wouldn't get up at 1 o'clock even to work."

Food Gifts Spell Our Thanks

By Drew Pearson

Today the United States enjoys its 326th Thanksgiving—a day given over to prayer and thanks for our good fortune. For the horn of plenty has been heaped high on America's table.

Vandenberg

During the past three weeks I have been privileged to witness first hand a great display of public generosity, as the American people, through the Friendship Train, sponsored a pilgrimage in reverse to the lands of their forefathers.

The Friendship Train, still growing as it moves in new sections across the land, will bring both the material nourishment that keeps men alive and the spiritual hopes that makes men hold their heads high. It will carry a message of thanks to those who still protect our remaining beachhead of freedom in western Europe.

As Michigan's Senator Arthur Vandenberg, introducing the interim European Aid Bill in the Senate this week, told his colleagues:

"The Freedom Train reminds all people that their heritage stems from liberty under law; that their richest blessing is a Constitution and a Bill of Rights which protects the spiritual dignity of man and the independence of the citizen; and that there are no values in life which could compensate us for the loss of these divine privileges.

"The Friendship Train exemplifies the devotion of our people to the humanities which make most of the world akin; demonstrates our instinct, our tradition and our impulse to feed the hungry and to feed the sick; and personifies the forthrightness which is the genius of a lasting peace."

Thanksgiving

In The White House

President Truman is celebrating Thanksgiving Day by worshiping at the First Baptist Church, followed by a quiet family dinner.

For most Presidents Thanksgiving Day has been mainly a day of work—due to the lame-duck Congress regularly scheduled for about December 1. It was Senator George Norris and his constitutional amendment abolishing the lame-duck session which relieved the White House of extra labors at this season of the year. But now, due to the emergency abroad, President Truman has Congress on his hands.

Looking back over the time-bleached records of the Library of Congress, the manner in which previous Presidents spent their Thanksgiving gives an interesting cross section of our history:

President Monroe, 1823, spent the day writing message to Congress. Unable to attend church . . . President Buchanan, 1857, long conference with Governor Walker of Kansas over influx of slave-traders as a result of Kansas-Nebraska Act . . . President Grant, 1876, unable to receive visitors; spent day writing message to Congress . . . President McKinley, 1900, spent day working on message to Congress and considering whether to recommend pensions for former slaves. The next day, Mrs. McKinley, bored, left for a shopping expedition in New York . . . President Harding, 1921, signed bills at the Capitol all morning, dined at noon with the family and informally away from the White House at night . . . President Coolidge, 1927, rose at his usual hour, took setting-up exercises, shaved himself, breakfasted with Mrs. Coolidge, then retired to his study to work on his message to Congress . . . President Hoover, 1930, rose at 6 a. m., played handball, breakfasted at 8, attended Friends' meeting, spent remainder of day writing his annual message.

Presidents Go To Church

Few people realize the problem a President of the United States faces when he goes to church. Most Presidents have been God-fearing men, accustomed to regular church attendance. However, there is usually so much publicity about their worship that the Chief Executive feels uncomfortable in the House of the Lord.

One reason Harry Truman attends the First Baptist Church about half a mile from the White House is that there is no fanfare. The preacher makes no special note of the President's presence. Whenever possible, Mr. Truman walks to church accompanied by only one Secret Service man.

The late President Roosevelt always complained that when he went to church, he had no privacy. This was partly because special ramps had to be constructed at the church entrance, and there was always the painful spectacle of the President being forced to move to his seat on uncomfortable braces while the congregation stared.

Roosevelt used to enjoy taking some of his less religious associates to church—one of them being Winston Churchill. Just after Pearl Harbor, Churchill flew to Washington to confer with Roosevelt, and the President insisted on Churchill's accompanying him to Christmas services. Churchill looked most uncomfortable. Roosevelt smiled encouragement. Finally the Prime Minister of England felt compelled to make some comment.

"Nice church," he remarked, looking at the ceiling.

Whenever I go out of town . . . The children always say . . . They hope the time will not be long . . . While daddy is away . . . They hug and kiss me when I leave . . . As though I were a gem . . . And tell me to be sure to bring . . . Some little gifts for them . . . Of course I know they care for me . . . And miss me when I go . . . (All children find it natural . . . Thanksgiving Dinner — European Plan...

We could publish a nice picture on Thanksgiving Day. A picture of a typical American family grouped about the table .... a scene that will be duplicated a million times today throughout the breadth of our great land. It would be a good picture ... a picture that should always remain ... a picture of a bountiful America enjoying the fruits of its efforts. But there is another picture. The picture you see above. A picture of famine and hunger, stalking lands thousands of miles away. On this Thanksgiving Day, let us be thankful that we can help these unfortunates ... let us be thankful that we have the will and the resources to see the job through. President Truman's Citizen's Food Committee has asked us to eat no meat on Tuesdays ... to eat no eggs on Thursdays. It is certainly a small request in a world so full of suffering.
